Byrnes To Govern Home Front War Issues

Heads Committee On Mobilizing Resources, Settling Agency Disputes

Anchor's Aweigh

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday gave former Supreme Court Justice James F. Byrnes full control of the wartime "home front" as director of a newly created Office of War Mobilization.

Created by executive order, Byrnes' new agency was given the following encompassing grants of power:

1. To develop policies and programs governing use of the Nation's natural and industrial resources, civilian manpower, maintenance and stabilization of the civilian economy and its adjustment to wartime conditions.

2. To settle disputes between Government agencies "concerned with production, procurement, distribution or transportation of military or civilian supplies, materials and products."

3. To issue directives on "policy or operations" to all Government agencies "as may be necessary to carry out the programs developed, the policies established, and the decisions made under the order." The President made it the "duty" of all agencies to obey the directives and submit any required "progress reports."

Vinson Now Stabilizer

President Roosevelt simultaneously appointed Judge Fred M. Vinson, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and former Democratic Congressman from Kentucky, to succeed Byrnes as economic stabilization director. He will follow the precedent set by Byrnes when he took over the stabilization job and leave the court.

Byrnes also became chairman of a War Mobilization Committee with which he will "advise and consult," although retaining power to make final decisions himself.

Composing the committee are Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Chairman Harry Hopkins of the Munitions Assignment Board, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board, and Vinson, the new stabilizer.

Can Summon Agency Heads

Deliberately kept small to permit it to function effectively, the committee will call before it other department and agency heads "whenever matters specially affecting such agencies are under consideration."

Whether the President actually had created a "war cabinet" was expected to be determined by the weight given its decisions by Byrnes. President Roosevelt specified in a formal statement that "in addition to its regular meetings, the committee will meet from time to time with me in the Cabinet Room."

Byrnes told reporters that the first committee meeting would be held this week.

He advised reporters that the key paragraph in the President's statement was the following one which tersely recounted governmental shortcomings which must be avoided:

"We are entering a phase of the war effort when we must stream-

Quits Bench Today

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

For the second time since the first of the year President Roosevelt has called upon the United States Court of Appeals for the District to release a member to fill one of the top jobs of Government.

Associate Justice Fred M. Vinson will resign today from the appellate bench to accept the directorship of the Office of Economic Stabilization succeeding James F. Byrnes, appointed yesterday to head the newly created Office of War Mobilization. He follows Associate Justice Wiley Blount Rutledge who was appointed to the Byrnes' vacancy on the Supreme Court last January.

Besides his appellate court justiceship Judge Vinson also was chief judge of the United States Emergency Court of Appeals here, a tribunal set up by Congress under the Price Control Act of 1942 to decide actions brought against the OPA Administrator.

There was no intimation yesterday as to who would be appointed to the vacancy in the Court of Appeals. The appointment of a successor to the Emergency Court is up to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

The other two Circuit Court judges serving with Judge Vinson on the Emergency Appeals Court are Judge Albert Maris of the Third Judicial Court and Judge Calvert Magruder of the First Circuit.

Just how much of a surprise was Vinson's appointment became immediately apparent throughout all the District courts yesterday. Justice Vinson himself had no definite idea what was in the offing until a call came from the White House at 3 p. m Thursday. He accepted the post during that conference.

At his press conference yesterday a note of regret at leaving the court was apparent in the announcement which officially told of his acceptance of the post:

"I leave the court after five years of service and the Emergency Court of Appeals, on which I have served since it was constituted by the

Msgr. Haas Heads Group Replacing Old McNutt Setup

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

An autonomous committee to "eliminate" discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color or national origin was established by President Roosevelt yesterday under Msgr. Francis J. Haas of Catholic University, who told a press conference shortly after that he was determined to clear up "this filthy situation" of discrimination.

The new Committee on Fair Employment Practice supersedes one of the same name which fell into inactivity recently. Under the executive order, the new committee was granted clear powers to eliminate discrimination by all employers, Federal departments and labor unions, the latter in matters of membership.

As reconstituted, the committee was removed from the jurisdiction of Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt and can itself formulate policies and make recommendations to Federal departments and agencies. The old committee was independent, but under McNutt in the actual mechanics of operation.

Father Haas, who has taken leave as dean of the School of Social Science of Catholic University, was a member of the original National Labor Relations Board, a special conciliator for the Labor Department since 1935, and a participant in the settlement of about 1500 labor disputes.

Stressing that the new committee "is not going to dodge anything," Father Haas asserted that "our country is too big for discrimination."

Father Haas declared that manpower is not being effectively used because of still prevalent discrimination, adding, "And this should not be tolerated, not only for the prosecution of the war, but in fairness and decency to all American people."

Holiday Grocery Warning Given

Housewives were warned yesterday to lay in a sufficient quantity of food to carry them through Monday as most of the grocery stores in the city will be closed on that day in celebration of Memorial Day. Grocers reported ample supplies of all food products except meat and potatoes. Before the stores reopen on Tuesday meat coupons E, F, G and H, coffee coupon 23 in book 1 and sugar coupon 12 in book 1 will expire.

Fathers' Deferment Bill Tabled

Senate Group Virtually Kills Draft Measure Passed by House

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday tabled, without a dissenting vote, the Kilday bill to defer fathers from the draft, an action which, in effect, killed a measure which the House recently passed with only seven votes against it.

Committee Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina told reporters the committee acted after receiving from its special adviser, Col. Lewis Sanders, a report holding that the measure's provision for induction on the basis of Statewide quotas "if literally interpreted" would "confine calls to single men since there will be no time in which there will not be at least one single man in a State."

The bill's sponsor, Representative Kilday (Democrat) of Texas, quickly interpreted the committee's decision as a reflection of Administration opposition to a provision of the measure which would repeal the work-or-fight order of War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt which used the threat of Selective Service induction to get men into essential industries.

Kilday Protests

"The sole objection of the Selective Service and Mr. Paul V. McNutt to this bill is that it would make impossible the use of the Selective Service in lieu of a National Service Act," Kilday asserted.

"The work-or-fight order is nothing more or less than a means of using the Selective Service Act to get men to work where the Government wants them to work instead of coming to Congress for direct authority to do that."

The Kilday bill provided for inductions in the following order and stipulated that men assigned to deferred categories could not be drafted until all men in a prior category within any State area were called for service:

First, single men without dependents; second, unmarried men who have persons who depend upon them for financial assistance; third, men married prior to December 8, 1941, but childless; fourth, fathers married prior to December 8, 1941.

Will Wait on Fathers

Reynolds emphasized that members of the committee wished to avoid induction of married men as long as possible, and Lieut. Col. Francis V. Keesling, jr., legislative liaison officer for Selective Service, interposed:

"We are going to hold the line on fathers as long as we can."

Orders for induction of "probably 90 per cent of men called for service could be appealed in the courts" if the bill became law, Colonel Sanders reasoned, since he maintained, there would be at least one single man in any State at any time.

R. A. F. Makes Use Of New Method In Latest Smash At Industrial Essen

By Lowell Bennett
International News Service Staff Writer

London, May 28. The Ruhr munitions center of Essen, world's most heavily bombed city, was devastated last night by a mighty fleet of R. A. F. bombers that subjected the industrial center, and particularly the great Krupp arms work, to a completely new assault technique.

[Waves of British raiders again roared across the Channel to pound the Axis-held continent early Saturday, the Associated Press reported.]

That Essen was the target for the latest type of air attack was disclosed tonight by the authoritative British Press Association, which said the city was kept under continuous bombardment for 50 minutes by "wave bombing" carried out by at least ten 50-plane "waves" of bombers.

This "wave bombing"—with varying loads of explosives for each wave—indicates a new plan has been worked out allowing greater accuracy, more perfect timing and consequently greater destruction, air circles believed.

Meanwhile, the round-the-clock pounding of the Continent was maintained in daylight today when American-built Ventura bombers of the R. A. F. attacked important coke ovens at the Belgian port of Zeebrugge. One bomber and one of the escorting Spitfire fighters failed to return.

More Than 500 Planes

Giant four-engined bombers, numbering 500 or more, rained tons of explosives on Essen to give that bomb-blasted objective its most punishing assault to date. The city had hardly recovered from three great air blows in March and April.

Violent explosions, too large even to be attributed to the 4000 and 8000-pound blockbusters dropped, shook industrial regions of the city, indicating munition stores had been blown up.

Veteran airmen who participated in the raid said the antiaircraft barrage at times was more violent than anything they had ever experienced. Twenty-three British bombers were lost.

Air circles said the weight of bombs dropped was considerably heavier than the 900 tons rained on Essen April 3. In the 55 raids on the city prior to last night, 10,000 tons of bombs were poured on the vital war plants.

Principal target of the raiders presumably was the giant Krupp Works, an easy target as it covers 800 acres of ground.

The raid was timed to prevent

The Vanishing Jap

Like Fighting Phantoms, U. S. Wounded Say of Attu Fray

By the Associated Press

Seattle, May 28.—Attu Island's first casualties came out of the fog-wrapped North to a Pacific Northwest Army hospital today, agreed that fighting the Japanese wouldn't be bad if you could see them.

Eight men arrived by boat. All but three, who were listed as sickness cases, told interviewers how they went ashore at Massacre Bay in the second wave of men, after the initial May 11 landing, without encountering enemy fire.

The only thunder came from United States guns afloat and ashore.

The wounded told of sludging along with heavy packs through mud and snow. It was cold and it was damp. Fog hid the snow-covered peaks above them.

But, said Pvt. John E. Terknett, 23-year-old farmer from Eastland, Tex., the Yanks rushed to their tasks from their landing barges like a bunch of collegians coming out of a football huddle.

"I wasn't scared," he said, as he reclined on his hospital cot with a bullet wound across his chest. "The men went in chattering and hollering as though they were having a good time after the suspense of being cramped up on their ship. I got a little wet getting ashore, but only about up to my knees."

Most of the wounded men never got a look at a Japanese soldier. The fog, the gun emplacements, tunnels and smokeless powder all contributed to concealing the enemy.

One who got a good look was Pvt. Woodrow Wilson French, 33, of Greenwood, Miss.

French, wounded in the hand, spotted three snipers and a machine gunner.

"There are two of those snipers who won't be doing any more damage," he asserted with a confident jerk of his head. "I got them with my rifle.

"I saw them fall over the ridge toward me. They were shooting at me while I was blazing away. How close were they? Close enough to put a shot through my pack. I got the second about five minutes after the first. After the first toppled over, the other one tried to move around to get a better shot at us."

In the fog of battle, they sometimes didn't even realize they were

Weird Warfare

By John M. Hightower

Attacking after preparation by deadly artillery and mortar fire, United States Army troops have penetrated deeply into the center of the area held by Japanese remnants on Attu Island, the Navy announced last night.

Advances were reported in the sector between Lake Cories and Lake Canirca on a line roughly marking the base of a peninsula at the northeastern tip of the embattled island. Much of the battling in this wild, mountainous territory was reported to be above the cloud line.

In the same general area, a communique said, troops attacked a ridge extending to the east of Fish-Hook Ridge, "after artillery and mortar preparation." The effect of this advance apparently was to outflank and thereby "neutralize" a Jap strongpoint on Fish-Hook Ridge itself.

Meanwhile, said the communique, which covered operations of Thursday, Army patrols continued to probe Jap positions on what was described as "the lower ridge extending eastward from the Chichagof Valley floor."

Given Air Support

Moreover, it was announced that Army bombers and fighters supported ground operations for the second consecutive day, an advantage which authorities believed would hasten the end of the mopping up operations which have been under way for approximately a week.

The communique also announced a new raid on Kiska Island on Thursday. Kiska is the main Japanese base in the Aleutians area. Due to poor visibility, the official report said, results were not observed.

Generally, it appeared that the enemy remnants on Attu are being slowly annihilated. Organized Jap resistance is gradually breaking down into isolated pockets of opposition, each of which must be cleaned out with bayonets and grenades.

Many of these miniature strongpoints had been dug into the peaks in the Fish-Hook Ridge sector at the base of Attu's northeastern peninsula. To attack them, it was learned, American troops had to fight their way out of the fog-filled valleys, along the snowy slopes and upward into the

Rain of Death

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), May 29.—Thousands of Russian troops, often fighting hand-to-hand, beat indecisively against the main German lines in the Caucasus yesterday, Berlin announced early today, while Moscow kept silent on the outcome of the struggle to oust the invaders from the narrow bridgehead opposite the Crimea.

A Transocean agency broadcast said the Russians, estimated to number 150,000, were backed by scores of tanks and planes in the swaying struggle, but thus far had failed to make "any improtant breaches" in Axis lines.

A midnight Russian communique for the second day announced merely that "fighting continues," although Moscow had reported earlier that 64 German planes were downed in one day over the area at noon bulletin yesterday also said the Black Sea Fleet air arm had sunk two enemy motor barges, presumably between the Caucasus and a cost of 13 Soviet aircraft. "Particularly fierce fighting developed for hilly country south of the swamps of the lower reaches of the Kuban River," said the Berlin broadcast. But the main Russian attack still was being delivered in the area of Krymskaya, below the Kuban River and 20 miles above Novorossisk, the Ger-

New Methods Helping Allies In U-Boat War

Situation Called 'Most Encouraging' Since Battle Began

By the Associated Press

London, May 28.—Picturing the battle of the Atlantic as the "most encouraging" since the start of the war, informed quarters said today that new methods of fighting submarines are enabling the Allies to smash the undersea offensive which Germany launched in a desperate effort to stave off invasion.

While more and more Allied ships are going through safely, the number of submarines being destroyed is mounting rapidly, it was disclosed by these sources.

With the sinking of subs increasing and the output of U-boats being crippled by continuous aerial pounding, these quarters disclosed that the U-boat menace not only is being held—but smashed.

At Portsmouth, meanwhile, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said in a speech that the battle against U-boats "continues to be encouraging."

"Our own new construction of merchant ships still is mounting," he said. "Our merchant shipping losses still are decreasing and sinkings of U-boats still are increasing. . . . The battle of U-boats still rages. It is not yet decided, but at least we feel better about it than we have."

At the same time, unofficial quarters believe that the number of enemy submarines sunk in May already has reached a new high for a single month.

Although the number of sinkings is kept secret, London newspapers say more than 12 were believed destroyed in the first three weeks of this month. The net increase of the Nazi U-boat fleet has been estimated officially at "more than 10" a month.

Five points stand out in the recent successful antisubmarine operations:

1. An increased number of escort ships and planes.

2. Reorganized defense, includ-

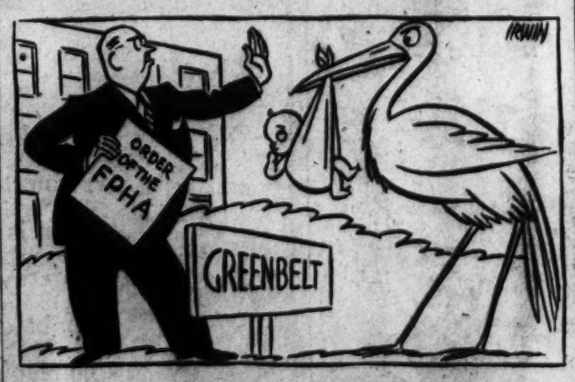
Prize Stork Town

New Greenbelt Leases Suggest Babies Must Have U. S. Sanction



Have you got written permission?

Residents of the Federally owned housing project at Greenbelt, Md., face a problem—whether they can have babies.

There are two and one-half times as many babies born at Greenbelt as in any town of similar size (7000) in the country, according to the Greenbelt Health Authority.

The matter cropped up as a major issue when tenants of the Federal town received their new leases. An obscure clause caught the attention of a few citizens in the community, where, said the community medical director, three and one-half babies are born on the average every week.

Way down in section 8 of the lease, which becomes effective on Tuesday, was this statement:

"The tenant agrees to notify the Government of any change in the composition of his household. Additional members shall not be permitted occupancy of the premises except with the written permission of the Government . . ."

It goes further than that, too, stating approval from the Government will be forthcoming "only in the event such additional membership shall not result in violation of the prescribed housing standards" of the town.

Thus, residents fear, the Government must not only approve tenants' applications for babies, but can tell them they can't have 'em if officials believe additional toddlers might upset Greenbelt's housing standards.

Right now there are at least 100 families at Greenbelt with something to worry about, the Greenbelt medical director revealed delicately yesterday.

A bachelor resident believes the clause was intended merely to prevent tenants moving in their Uncle Joes and Aunt Hortenses or having friends drop in for a couple of years' visit. A baby, he said, is really not a member of the family,

Dr. Parran's View

Longer Life for Average Man Seen in World Food Program

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

Hot Springs, Va., May 28.—Out of the International Food Conference will come a "universal diet" adding 10 years to the "active, virile" life span of mankind, Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, revealed today.

The nutrition experts and scientists representing the United and Associate Nations are in "complete agreement," Dr. Parran said on an "optimum" diet, containing a minimum of 2000 to 3000 calories fortified by "protective foods," which will help answer man's search for the key to longevity.

Written in terms of calories translatable into specific amounts of foods available nationally or regionally, the diet will be composed of proteins, fats, carbohydrates, calcium, iron and the additional "protective" vitamins A, B, C, D, plus thiamin, nicotinic acid and riboflavin. The protective elements credited with adding to the life span can be found in meat, milk, green vegetables, citrus fruits and cod liver oil.

The knowledge of the comparatively "new science of nutrition" pooled at the International Food Conference "is as important to the health and life of mankind as Pasteur's discoveries in disease protection," Parran declared.

"Through the new science of nutrition it will be possible to advance the health of humans no less than it has been accomplished

Capital's 13th Blackout Test Called 'Most Effective' Yet

Washington's thirteenth blackout and twenty-second air-raid test, held last night from 9:07 to 9:57 o'clock, was declared by Capt. A. C. Whitehurst, director of Civilian Defense, to have been the most effective test yet held in the District.

A major factor in the success, all Civilian Defense officials and Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of Police, agreed, was the innovation of the final all clear signal heralded by a continuous 15-second blast of the sirens.

Whitehurst said he felt the public should be congratulated for their willingness to cooperate. Spotted infranctions of the lights-out rule were reported, but these instances were noticeably fewer than on previous tests.

The yellow signal went on at 9:07, and the first blue at 9:17; the red came on at 9:32 and the second blue at 9:42. The all clear sounded at 9:57. This timing was done by Army observers.

Especially commended by Whitehourst were the Metropolitan Police, who had been charged with the duty of turning the street lights off and on. Equally efficient, he said, were the air-raid wardens who shepherded people from the streets into shelters and cleared streetcars and buses.

The speed of buses during the blue signal, when they are supposed to run not more than 15 miles an hour, drew criticism.

Whitehurst said high OCD officials had made tours of the city during the test and his reports were that it was effective with some few exceptions.

Chinese Battle Jap Advance on Chungking; Enemy Planes Dump Bombs on City of Enshin

By the Associated Press

Chungking, May 28.—While Chinese troops fought to smash Japanese advances toward this capital, 13 enemy planes today swooped over Enshin, some 200 air miles northeast of here, and dumped loads of delayed-action bombs, Chinese dispatches reported.

What damage occurred in Enshin, provincial capital of Hupeh Province in western China, where the Japanese have concentrated the two week-old offensive, was not reported immediately.

The Chinese Central News Agency announced that Chinese bombers roared over Ichang with fighters running interference and caused considerable damage to military installations in the strategic port on the winding Yangtze River.

All the raiders returned safely from Ichang, which the Japanese took several days ago and have been using as a springboard in the drive.

A Chinese high command communique reported that Chinese land troops were locked in battle with two Japanese divisions west of Ichang, where 1000 enemy soldiers were reported killed Tuesday and Wednesday.

In addition, it was said, the Chinese have won back several points west of Limsien, 75 miles southeast of Ichang.

An official statement said tonight that General Chen Cheng, war vice minister and one of China's top strategists, was in command of the forces pitted against the Japanese in the new offensive which Chinese authorities call the opening phase of the fight for Chungking.

(A Japanese broadcast declared that China's elite well-equipped troops of the eighteenth army were about to be exterminated in the Yangtze war zone in the vicinity of Ichang. It said that in 20 days of fighting the Chinese eighty-seventh and ninety-seventh armies had been practically wiped out and Yuyangkwan and Changyang occupied in a southwest advance 35 miles from Ichang.)

'Utter Defeat'

Italy to Be Bombed Out, Says Eden

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

Portsmouth, England, May 28 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden declared today that Italy particularly, now lying "wide-open to air attack," would be bombed ceaselessly until the Italian people call quits.

Speaking to a "Wings for Victory" luncheon, he emphasized the vulnerable position of Italy, but also promised bombs for Germany as well "until the utter defeat of the Nazi and Fascist regimes and all they stand for."

Recalling the ruin strewn by the German air force on Warsaw and Rotterdam and Mussolini's request for a share in the blitzing of London, Eden scorned suggestions, whether from within Britain or from safety seekers inside the Axis, "that bombardment from the air is a weapon that shall be yielded up."

This remark evidently was directed against a small group in Britain which has protested the destruction of homes and civilian lives in the R. A. F. mass raids.

Yanks Make New Gains on Attu

This fighting—now under the clouds, now above them—with its concurrent changes in temperature, terrain and light intensity, added the final touch of fantasy to a battle that has developed from its start 16 days ago against a weird background of mountainous, treeless landscape, violent winds, biting cold, and rain, sleet and snow falling interchangeably.

A Navy communique gave the latest combat reports from Attu and disclosed also that Army medium bombers and Warhawk fighters had made three attacks on Kiska Island, main Japanese base, 172 nautical miles to the southeast, on Wednesday. The Navy said numerous hits were observed on the main camp and runway.

The air attacks on Kiska were considered here to have potential significance. It may be the beginning of a campaign to soften up that big base for the final drive to restore the western Aleutians to American control. This preliminary softening up, which may last several weeks, is expected to consist of a blockade to prevent Kiska from receiving supplies or reinforcements and of bombing to destroy the supplies and reduce the troops already on the island.

Invasion Nerves Hit Monte Carlo

Bern, Switzerland, May 28 (AP).—A Marseille dispatch to the Tribune De Geneve said today that a great number of people, impressed by rumors of an Allied landing on the French coast, had left Monte Carlo for the mountains.

Authorities were striving to restore calm, but the dispatch said that war nerves were spreading.

Allied Landing Barges Attacked at Bizerte And Sousse, Italians Say as Tension Grows

By the Associated Press

London, May 28.—Rising Italian fears that invasion is near were pictured today in the Italian announcement that Allied landing barges were bombed in Bizerte and Sousse and an unconfirmed Morocco report that Mussolini, at a secret meeting with his party chiefs decided further to reinforce Sicily and Sardinia.

Coming on the heels of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in Washington to the press indirectly inviting Italy to seek a separate peace, the Morocco radio report indicated the answer, so far, was "no."

The report, which had no confirmation, said all fortifications on the island approaches would be strengthened immediately, anti-aircraft batteries increased, and Sicily's airports, targets for heavy Allied bombings, would be enlarged.

Claim Destroyer Hit

The Italian communique reported the bombing of landing barges and the Rome radio, as recorded in London, said Axis planes have been attacking "a large number of enemy armed landing craft seen lying in Moroccan and Algerian ports. In Bizerte Harbor particularly a large number of these craft were attacked and a destroyer was also believed hit."

Italian attention to these ports was significant since they are nearest to the recent Allied targets in Sardinia, Sicily and Pantelleria.

At the same time Axis broadcasts renewed reports of troopship and escort movements from Gibraltar saying an aircraft carrier and four destroyers had just left the British fort below which laden troop and supply ships are reported massed.

Reports from neutral countries strengthened the picture of heightened perturbation in Italy. A Russian dispatch from Bern said all law courts in Rome have been transferred to Florence—a move which some observers predicted would be followed by the Italian government. All universities in southern provinces were reported closed and the students sent to northern Italy.

Other reports indicated similar fears along Europe's borders.

A French independent agency dispatch from Ankara said several Hungarian divisions, including tanks, had arrived in Bulgaria, presumably en route to Greece. Large air maneuvers were recently held in the Athens area, the Cairo radio said.

Stockholm dispatches said the Germans had massed almost 200,000 men and nearly 1000 heavy guns along the Norwegian coast, bringing German forces in that country to at least 10 divisions.

A Tass story reported that in Denmark German secret police had prepared a list of 150,000 persons to be evacuated in case of any invasion. Those suspected of Allied sympathy are already being shipped from possible danger points, the Russian agency said.

Giraud Awaits De Gaulle Visit To Form New French Regime

By the Associated Press

Algiers, May 28.—A momentous conference looking to organization of a French wartime and postwar government awaited only the imminent arrival of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, who will be received by Gen. Henri Giraud, Allied High Commissioner in North Africa.

(London heard that the meeting would be tonight.)

Gen. Georges Catroux, liaison officer in preliminary negotiations between the two French chiefs, arrived today from London and will help arrange the meeting.

It will be the first face-to-face conference between De Gaulle and Giraud since their handshake before President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at the Casablanca conference last January.

Negotiations have gone on by letter and consultation with General Catroux who has traveled frequently between Algiers and London. Spokesmen for both generals have announced that agreement has been reached on virtually all questions.

Arrangements were also expected to be concluded on the procedure for selecting France's postwar government—through a 7-year-old republican law which provides for a provisional assembly.

News of the meeting evoked fresh reports of a shake-up in high civil posts in French Africa. The new executive committee is expected to hold its initial sessions in Algiers and among those officials observers said may be removed are Marcel Peyrouton, governor of Algieria; Pierre Boisson, governor of French West Africa, and Gen. Charles Nogues, resident general of Morocco. All three have been criticized by the De Gaullists.

Allied Bombers Again Blast Italy's Island Defense Ring

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters In North Africa, May 28.—The destriction of enemy airfields on Italy's island defense ring continued full blast yesterday as American medium bombers and fighters from Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz's North African command ripped airdromes at Villacidro and Decimomannu in southern Sardinia.

Both fields are in protective range of the Axis supply port of Cagliari, and the American airmen had to fight off a storm of German and Italian fighters.

Thirteen enemy fighters were destroyed in combat at the cost of a single American Warhawk fighter, whose pilot was rescued from the Mediterranean.

Marauder medium bombers battered the Decimomannu airport with more than 4000 fragmentation bombs, which crewmen said wiped off many grounded planes—the main objective. Marauder machine gunners shot down seven intercepting enemy fighters, and their Warhawk escorts blasted six others.

The other all-American team of Billy Mitchell medium bombers and Lightning fighters did the honors at Villacidro field, where they destroyed many parked planes. Their opposition was much less intense than that met over Decimomannu.

Pantelleria, whose airport long since was pounded into uselessness by Allied planes and warships, was given its daily bath of fire by bomb-carrying Lightnings and Warhawks. Harbor defenses and artillery installations were shaken up by the swift fighters and a big explosion was reported at the edge of Pantelleria Harbor. Lightnings also shot up a 150-foot freighter in the Gulf of Palmas on Sardinia.

Berlin's version said the Russians had lost scores of tanks and planes after failing to make good initial penetrations in the German lines, which were punctured by concentrated artillery fire. These breaches were restored on Thursday, the Germans said, after Nazi machine gunners mowed down Russian infantrymen.

Long-range Red army planes were blasting German airdromes behind the front, and a Moscow broadcast said this strategic bombing was general along the entire front.

War Sidelights

Private Flour-Bombs a General

Second Army Headquarters, Somewhere in Tennessee, May 28 (INS).—A private took a potshot at a brigadier general with a flour sack—made a bull's eye—and thus became an Army maneuver "hero" tonight.

The private was Yother E. Elmer, of Cleveland, Tenn. The brigadier general—who was bopped on the right ear—was E. A. Regnier.

Pvt. Elmer was teamed with Pvt. Walter Jones of Volant, Pa., as a rear guard bazooka crew with their mechanized cavalry unit.

The zero hour was near. Both soldiers scampered to a pile of brush—to wait on the "enemy."

General Regnier came jouncing along the terrain in his jeep. Pvt. Elmer tossed one, two three flour "grenades."

The general was down at three.

Pvt. Elmer was fittingly dubbed "Sergeant York" of this maneuver.

New Folding Litter

London (Saturday), May 29 (AP). A sectional utility litter so compact that it can be carried slung over the shoulder like a gas mask has been developed by Lieut. Col. Sidney Hedley Brigham of New York City, chief of military railways for the European theater of United States Army operations, it was announced today. Compactness and flexibility make it readily adaptable for use on tanks, submarines and ambulance trains and it can be used as a hammock in ships and airplanes or as a sling for unloading, Army officials said.

effective repair of the Krupp plant's damage and also to mete out additional damage to the city's sprawling war industries and communications. Neutral sources reported that Essen's buses and trolleys only resumed operation yesterday as a result of the last raid on April 30.

Although weather was overcast, gaps in the clouds revealed large fires. One pilot reported that "fires appeared to weld themselves into a solid mass over a large area."

Berlin admitted that "great damage" was caused in the Ruhr industrial valley, "particularly at Essen," where it said a heavy weight of explosives and incendiary bombs was dropped.

The raid on Essen was coordinated with other bombing attacks on Ruhr objectives and mining of enemy waters, the Air Ministry said. The night sorties, carried out shortly after midnight, came in the wake of a Mosquito plane attack on Jena, in central Germany, shortly before dark.

Two formations of the speedy wooden British bombers braved intense antiaircraft fire and a balloon barrage to plaster targets in Jena from 200-foot altitude. Jena, home of the Zeiss optical works and the Schott glass factory, turns out instruments vital to the German war machine. Three Mosquitoes were lost, the Air Ministry said, two colliding over the target.

[With two nights to go, Britain already has set a high record for one week's bombing with about 5000 tons loosed in the three assaults, which cost a total of 88 planes, the Associated Press pointed out.]

wounded. Their orders had been to "go up and clean out those snipers," or "go up and knock out that gun."

Always it was up, up and up in those first days of fighting.

One mortar shell wounded two of the five. They were Pvt. Joseph E. Kenski, 28, of Detroit, a former chipper at the Bohn Aluminum plant there, and Pvt. James Allen Meredith, 24, a former painter, whose mother, Mrs. Ada Meredith, resides at 912 South Eleventh in Springfield, Ill.

They were in an ammunition-carrying detail on the third day of their action on the Massacre Bay Front. They couldn't see where the machinegun chatter and z-z-zing of sniper's shots were coming from.

The contingent for which they were bearing ammunition had reached the crest of a hill after tireless plodding and had decided to retire halfway down the slope to replot their attack in the face of hidden fire, Meredith explained.

From the sonud of it, the Japanese firing was coming from only about 100 yards away while the group was up on the crest.

"The Japs must have followed us back down," he said. "I was sitting there opening my rations for a bite to eat, not thinking there was any immediate danger. Most of the others were digging themselves into holes.

"Suddenly a mortar shell landed close to us. I didn't know I had been hit for a while. I thought it was only a rock from the blast that struck my foot. In about 5 minutes I looked down and saw a hole through my boot."

He said the only beach opposition he had heard about was met by the first troops ashore. He also heard that there was viscious hand-to-hand fighting before the Americans finally took the ridge toward which they were driving when he was wounded.

Vinson's New Job Thrills His Spouse

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

The gray-eyed woman who 19 years ago urged her husband to refuse to run for Congress and to remain out of public life yesterday was happy that she had reversed her convictions as Fred M. Vinson resigned his post as Chief Judge of the Emergency Court of Appeals to become Economic Stabilization Director.

"It's fortunate that no one paid any attention to me in 1924 when I was so anxious to remain in a small Kentucky town," Mrs. Vinson said. "When Justice Byrnes gave up a lifetime job with its security and honor to take the job of stabilization director, I remember thinking how magnificent it was of him to do so. Now that practically the same thing has happened to us, I realize that it is, indeed, a privilege rather than a sacrifice to be able to contribute toward winning the war."

Columbia Hospital Director

Although she has lived in Washington almost long enough to be classified as a native, Mrs. Vinson still regards Ashland, Ky., as her home. But she has put forth sufficient roots in the Capital to provide absorbing interests for the three seasons of the year that she lives here—and although she retreats to Kentucky during the summer, she has spent enough warm months here to ascertain that she prefers her adopted town to any save Ashland.

At the moment Mrs. Vinson's particular concern is the enlargement of Columbia Hospital, of which she is a director. The job probably will have to be postponed until after the war but it ranks A-1 on her list of postwar plans.

Although she stoutly maintains that she has remained in the background as much as possible since her husband's early days in Congress, friends know that Mrs. Vinson has worked diligently in behalf of the Thrift Shop and the Stage Door Canteen, where she serves regularly.

The Vinsons have two sons—the eldest, Fred, jr., has completed his first year at Washington-Lee University and now is awaiting induction into the Army.

Fred Jr., Thrills Fred Sr.

"Do you know, I think his father was more thrilled when young Fred became the first freshman in 50 years to win a school letter than he was at being appointed to this new job," Mrs. Vinson observed.

Jim, their younger son, attends Alice Deal Junior High School and, is somewhat of an authority on Army Air Forces planes, is thoroughly envious of his Army-bound brother.

For the future? The lives of the other three Vinsons will remain much the same in the comfortable apartment they have occupied for the past 10 years at Wardman Park—but they may pay more than customary attention to headlines, what with a new stabilization director in the family.

Glad She Failed To Curb Vinson

MRS. FRED M. VINSON

Vinson Named Director of Stabilization

Chief Justice of the United States, with deep feeling. The President's call at this time was of such nature that it left me no alternative.

"Since the President concluded that I might be useful in furthering the war effort, personal considerations were foreclosed, and in that spirit, I will enter upon the new duties. Naturally I can make no statement as to policy. I will meet each problem as it arises," the statement concluded.

The air of disappointment in the Court of Appeals at losing Justice Vinson was, perhaps, best expressed by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner who also told of his surprise at the suddenness of the appointment. When asked about the appointment yesterday the Chief Justice said he had no intimation of the change until the time of its occurrence.

He expressed confidence in Justice Vinson's ability to handle the difficult job and besides terming him a "truly great lawyer" praised the work he had accomplished since appointment to the court.

"In his work in this court he grew in stature with every term of court and with every opinion he wrote," Chief Justice Groner said. "The regret we feel in having him transferred to the Executive Branch of the Government is tempered by the consciousness of his outstanding ability for that task and his willingness to make any personal sacrifice to help solve the great economic problems of these difficult times," he concluded.

Justice Vinson was born in Louisa, Ky., in 1890 and received his college and law education at Centre College, Danville, Ky. One of the school's best known athletes, he captained the baseball team in 1910 and 1911, playing shortstop.

Perhaps one of the judge's first severe lessons in economics was finding ways and means to pay for his education. In order to do so he taught in a local prep school there, won a fellowship, tutored fellow students and acted as law librarian.

He first began his law practice at Louisa, later became city attorney and afterwards commonwealth attorney for the Thirty-second Judicial District of Kentucky.

With the exception of the Seventy-first Congress (1928-1930) he had been a member of Congress continuously from 1923 until his appointment to the bench by President Roosevelt in 1938.

While in Congress Justice Vinson had a record of being a stanch New Dealer. He was coauthor of the Guffey-Vinson Coal Act and was chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee when he left Congress.

Justice Vinson maintains his Washington residence at the Wardman Park Hotel with Mrs. Vinson and their two sons, Fred M. Vinson, jr., 18, a freshman at Washington and Lee University, who is about to go into the Army, and Jimmy, 14, who attends Alice Deal Junior High School here.

Byrnes Heads Mobilization Office; To Govern Home Front War Problems and Settle Agency Row

line our activities, avoid duplication, and overlapping, eliminate interdepartmental friction, make decisions with dispatch, and keep both our military machine and our essential civilian economy running in team and at high speed."

Byrnes has unofficially acted to settle interagency disputes for some months. However, in granting the authority officially, the order specified that Byrnes was not to settle disputes arising under the October 2 Price Control Act involving War Labor Board—Office of Price Administration price-wage rows and OPA Department of Agriculture disputes over price ceilings on farm commodities.

This was done, it was understood, at Byrnes specific request. As economic stabilization director, he found much of his time consumed with administrative details of prices and wages.

Instead, it is believed that he will devote more attention to problems of war production. As an earnest of this, the White House announced that Byrnes will make an important address on production from Spartansburg, S. C., his home town, Monday night.

Only comparable grant of presidential power was to Nelson in January, 1942, when the WPB was set up. Nelson never used much of his power with the result that much of it was stripped away and granted to a galaxy of "czars" including those for rubber, food, oil, and transportation.

Byrnes recaptured authority over the "czars" in this order, but by the same token absorbed the top power over production and procurement held by Nelson. This provides the armed services with a formal court of appeal from Nelson's decisions—a development which the services viewed with favor.

No comment was available from the WPB chief who plans, it was understood, to follow a "wait and see" policy to determine whether the new move was directed at him.

Manpower Control Curbed

Although Byrnes may issue directives to the War and Navy Departments on production and procurement, control over manpower was specifically restricted to labor "not in the armed forces," a clear indication that military strategy will not be within his province.

It appeared that Byrnes' authority was exceeded only by that of the President and equaled only by the chiefs of staff.

Byrnes said he would retain his present office in the East wing of the White House. Vinson is slated to receive space elsewhere.

Appointment of Vinson, who spent 8 of his 14 years in the House on the Ways and Means Committee, including a period as chairman of its Taxation Subcommittee, was taken as evidence that the Administration plans to make use of taxation as an anti-inflation weapon.

Vinson was expected to launch a new drive to "hold the line"—a phase of "home front" operations which has not been functioning properly.

To Relieve President

At a special press conference to explain the order, Byrnes said that part of this job would be to "save the President many burdens."

"The President's time must be devoted to strategy of war and the staffs charged with supervision of the military programs."

Byrnes added significantly, "Judging from experience, most differences can be ironed out without bothering the President."

However, he made it clear that President Roosevelt would still make the decisions on matters of major importance. The order specified that the Office of War Mobilization was to act "subject to the direction and control of the President."

The new director of war mobilization acknowledged that the idea for the shuffle originated in Congress during the last session when the Tolan Committee in the House and the Truman Committee in the Senate gave strong indorsement to a bill to create an Office of War Mobilization with similar powers.

The measure was pigeon-holed at the instance of the Administration, but was reintroduced this session by Senator Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia, and received the approval of a subcommittee of the Military Affairs Committee which he headed.

Byrnes Urged Not to Reduce WLB Prestige

James F. Byrnes yesterday was advised in the Senate against relegating the War Production Board to a minor role in the operation of the new Office of War Mobilization.

Significantly, the advice was given by two of a group of legislators which for nearly 18 months has been urging reorganization of the war administration substantially along lines established by President Roosevelt's executive order.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, told the Senate he feared that under "this new arrangement the War Production Board and the men responsible for its functioning will lose their ability to function as they will be a minority" on Byrnes' War Mobilization Committee.

It became clear a moment after Johnson spoke that he had in mind not only WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson, but Nelson's executive vice chairman, Charles E. Wilson, who is the operations chief of WPB.

Pepper's View

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida told Johnson that he would be "alarmed" if he thought submergence of WPB would be a result of the President's order, but added:

"I feel that Byrnes is too wise a man to interfere with the authority of so able a man as Charles Wilson."

Wilson, it was recalled, became a widely favored congressional candidate for director of war mobilization, the post to which the President yesterday appointed Byrnes, as the result of secret testimony given last month to a Senate Military Affairs subcommittee on the war mobilization bill.

At one of the subcommittee's hearings, it was learned, Byrnes was opposed for the post by Julius Luhrsen, legislative representative of the Railway Labor Executives Association, while Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Malcolm Muir of the National Association of Manufacturers war committee, advocated unification of the war production administration within WPB.

Some "Watchful Waiting"

The President's action met universal approval in Congress, yet in many instances comment was moderated by attitudes of "watchful waiting" amounting to near skepticism while House and Senate sponsors of war mobilization legislation served notice that their bill would be kept ready for reconsideration should its objectives not be met by Mr. Roosevelt's order.

Pepper called the order a "vindication of the efforts of the Congress to achieve fundamentally the objectives which the President has adopted as his own."

The move for mobilization of war agencies was launched in Congress December 18, 1941, when such a step was urged in a report to the House from a committee investigating migrant labor problems and headed by Representative Tolan (Democrat) of California.

March, 1942, Report

This was followed by a second report from the committee in March, 1942, the introduction of a ministry of supply bill by Senator Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia and the subsequent sponsorship of a war mobilization measure by Tolan in the House and Kilgore and eight other members of the Senate.

Ten Senators yesterday joined in a statement which "welcomed" the executive order "as a strong step in the right direction." The President, the Senators said, "recognized" the subcommittee's recommendations.

One of the signers of the statement, Senator Murray (Democrat) of Montana, joined with Toland in urging Byrnes to set up an advisory council of labor, management, agricultural and small business representatives to which proposals should be referred before decisions are made. Failure to do this, Murray declared, "might be fatal."

Other signers of the statement were Senators Thomas of Utah, Green of Rhode Island, Wallgren of Washington, Truman of Missouri, Johnson and Pepper (Democrats) and Capper of Kansas, Holman of Oregon and Ball of Minnesota (Republicans).

through control of infections," he added.

Only because of acute universal food shortages will the dream of the "optimum diet" be delayed, Parran said.

"The greatest possible increase in food production will not for decades be enough to meet the minimum adequate diet."

Experiments, tests and continually increasing knowledge in the field of nutrition has proved that mankind "in the new world" can be healthier, more productive and longer-living, but the long period of food shortages facing the world after the war will retard the beginning of a golden age for man.

The goals agreed on by the conference nutrition experts will first of all eliminate, as far as possible, actual starvation, then wipe out diseases of malnutrition, and finally supply all peoples with an adequate diet.

In order to reach the "vulnerable groups" the nutrition section of the conference is in agreement on recommending school lunches for children, supplementary diets for pregnant women, and low-cost canteens in mines and factories. The conference will also adopt a standard of nutrition which will be available in each country built around the produce and eating habits of each.

provisions the committee was empowered to bring about inclusion in all contracts hereafter negotiated or renegotiated, clauses by contractors not to discriminate against any employe or applicant. The employers are also obligated to include similar clauses in subcontracts.

Likewise, all Government departments and agencies concerned with vocational and training programs for war production are required to administrate these programs without discrimination of any kind.

Holiday and Expiring Coupons Expected to Jam Food Stores

With the expiration of some of the meat, coffee and sugar ration coupons over the weekend and the Memorial Day holiday following, Washington food dealers were preparing for a record day today.

Dealers said yesterday they had experienced abnormally heavy buying of foods for the holidays. Most stores will be closed Monday.

In preparation the store managers reported they had attempted to obtain extra stocks of food wherever possible, although they were short of meat and—yes, they had no potatoes.

Heads of the chain stores expressed fear meat stocks would not be sufficient to carry them through the day, particularly if customers all insisted on buying choice cuts.

Expiring Monday will be the E, F, G and H red meat and butter stamps.

Also expiring will be coupon No. 12 in book 1 which is good for 5 pounds of sugar. This coupon will expire Monday at midnight.

Coffee stamp No. 23 in book 1 will expire tomorrow.

The Food Distribution Administration reported the arrival of one car of potatoes from South Carolina. Produce men thought it was going to one of the chain stores.

Also encouraging was the report of the arrival of three carloads of lettuce from California and five cars of tomatoes.

There came also four cars of bananas which are scheduled to be on the market today. Even a carload of currently rare onions arrived from Texas. There were also reported plenty of beans and peas.

Police Arrive As Man Puts Fist Through Window

The heat notwithstanding, this is the truth and a matter of public record.

Wednesday morning a police squad car, investigating a disturbance, drove up in front of a restaurant at 418 Twelfth Street Northwest just in time to see Nocolo Colodonato push his fist through the restaurant's glass door.

Nicolo, withdrawing his arm from the glass door, ran over to the parked squad car, opened the door, and called "taxi."

Nicolo, who resides at 900 I Street Northwest, pleaded guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to destroying private property and Judge George D. Neilson continued his case until tomorrow.

In Wartime, Too

The dismal commentaries on human selfishness and thoughtlessness in the face of a wartime crisis have come to us from Arlington, where the virtual breakdown of bus transportation at certain hours has passed almost unnoticed.

One is from an elderly lady, who writes: "Yesterday I had an appointment with my doctor. I waited for a bus for over an hour. Two of them passed me up because they were already full. I finally gave it up, came home and canceled the appointment." But here is the shocking part: "While I was standing alongside the highway, I counted 75 cars going toward the city with only the driver, and no passengers. Not one stopped. Why couldn't some of them stop? What were they doing with empty cars when people were stranded all along the road? Isn't there some way to make them stop for passengers when the buses aren't able to handle the traffic?"

The second communication is a memo from a member of our own staff, who says: "On my way downtown yesterday I picked up a serviceman and two women at a bus stop. Two of them had been waiting for two hours for a bus, but all buses were full and none stopped. And in two hours not one car passing by had stopped to pick anyone up. Farther down the road were two Army men with traveling bags, frantically trying to thumb a ride. I picked them up, too, although one had to sit in the other's lap. They were trying to make a train and had been trying for nearly an hour to get either a bus or a ride in a private car, without success. Coming back later in the evening, I noticed at least 30 people waiting at the Wisconsin Avenue bus stop. I pulled up and asked if anyone wanted a lift out Lee Highway, and filled up my car immediately with profusely grateful people. Two of them had been waiting for a bus from 9:30 to 11:30, but again all buses were full and not one had even hesitated at the Wisconsin Avenue stop. And again, not one passenger car had stopped."

What's the matter with us? Out West no driver would think of passing up people stranded in this way. Are Easterners as selfish as they seem?

Planning Function

There was no frenzy or passion about the vote in the Senate which cut the ground from beneath the National Resources Planning Board. Senators debated the merits of the board at length and concluded that the service it has rendered is not worth a million dollars a year or even half a million. An allowance of $200,000 for the coordination of State and local planning functions was somewhat grudgingly voted and this may be trimmed in conference, for the House had cut the NRPB off without a cent.

The debate makes it clear that the Senate voted against the NRPB and not against the idea of postwar planning. There were repeated references to Senator George's committee, which has begun a study of economic and financial problems that will have to be met in the period of reconstruction. The Senate prefers planning that will have a direct relation to subsequent legislation. It simply has no faith in the academic type of studies which the NRPB sponsored.

We agree that the NRPB to date has not been worth its cost. It has functioned as a planning agency only in a general sense of the word. Much of its attention seems to have been given to the formulation of vague objectives and to the writing of propaganda to support those objectives. These efforts may have been valuable from the viewpoint of the President, for the NRPB made itself a sort of ideological spearhead for the New Deal. But the debate on Thursday was ample proof that they serve only to amuse the legislators who will give form to our national policy in the postwar years.

It was easy, therefore, to undercut the NRPB. More constructive thinking will be required to give the planning function the place in our governmental structure which its importance demands. No doubt the George Committee will come nearer to filling the demand than the NRPB has done. But we do not believe that it is the final answer. It represents only one branch of Congress. And it leaves the executive branch in a disadvantageous position so far as planning is concerned. Undoubtedly experts in many departments will be called before the George Committee to present data and offer suggestions as to how we can employ the vast energies and resources of this country after the war to the best advantage of the people. But thoroughgoing cooperation between the President and Congress will be necessary if this gigantic problem is to be met effectively.

Perhaps the best approach could be made through a joint committee representing the Senate, the House and the Executive. That plan was followed in the case of the Temporary National Economic Committee and the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures. We hope that the Senate will not be content with having stripped the NRPB of its funds and functions. The rough economic weather that lies ahead makes careful planning imperative, and that planning should obviously be guided by men who will have some influence upon its translation into practicable policies.

War Cabinet

The crisis in administration which has overcome the war effort on the home front has at last been recognized by the President. He has set up another alphabetical agency. That in itself is not likely to give an impression of true reform against the background of sprouting, withering, and colliding war agencies which have hitherto made up the kaleidoscope of Washington. But this time the object is to tie up the alphabetical agencies and the armed services into one over-all organization. In other words, the new Office of War Mobilization is to act as a war cabinet, the demand for which has arisen far and wide as the hole at the top of our war organization has become increasingly manifest. This OWM is to be headed by a director of war mobilization, and to that all-important post the present director of economic stabilization, Mr. James F. Byrnes, has been appointed. The role is analogous to that of Deputy President, for Mr. Byrnes will be chairman of the new agency. He will have in his cabinet Secretaries Stimson and Knox, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Hopkins, and the new director of economic stabilization, Judge Fred M. Vinson.

That the President has at last bowed to the storm of demand for a functioning war cabinet is cause for gratification. The existing Cabinet could not do this function. For most of the work of government is nowadays being done by czars with no Cabinet roles who have relegated some of the regular Cabinet officers to relative obscurity. The leading victim of this system or lack of it is Secretary Wickard. Mr. Wickard is so bereft of authority as a result of the appointment of Food Administrator Davis that he is Secretary of Agriculture in name only, think also of the way Mr. Nelson's job dwarfs any cabinet post. Mr. Nelson is far more influential over the national economy than the Secretary of Commerce, who, furthermore, must defer to the Board of Economic Warfare in the supervision of our international trade. Secretary Perkins at the Labor Department has likewise been shorn of most of her prewar importance by the transfer of responsibility for labor relations to the War Labor Board and the War Manpower Commission. In the circumstances the President's Cabinet has almost ceased to have even the slight importance as a collective body which it possesses under the American system.

At the same time the need for an over-all organization has been increased by war requirements; indeed, it has been made indispensable. It is physically impossible to expect the President to supervise the ramified agencies which he has had to bring into existence. His principal job in wartime is that of commander in chief. A wise commander in chief, it is said, only has half a dozen men report to him. Mr. Roosevelt must have hundreds. Doubtless he felt that he would be spared much of the supervision of his administrators when he made Mr. Byrnes director of economic stabilization. Certainly Mr. Byrnes' powers were sweeping. But when he sought to exercise those powers in guiding the czars, he found himself dealing with men armed with executive orders making them responsible to the President, and it is clear that they went to the President over Mr. Byrnes' head when they got into jurisdictional disputes. The new device will stop this practice by making Mr. Byrnes' authority unimpeachable.

Doubtless the greatest advantage of the new instrumentality is that there is now a means outside the White House of ironing out the outstanding jurisdictional dispute in Washington. This is the recurrent conflict between the military and civilian authorities. The rows over the disposition of our manpower and resources, presumably, will now be reviewed by the OWM as the supreme policy-making body under the President. Accordingly the first task of OWM should be to set the policy which will realize the President's and the commonsense objective of having the right man in the right place at the right time. Hitherto there has been no such policy because there has been no coordination in effect among the claimant agencies. In default, competition for both men and resources has been the rule, with pulling and hauling by rival administrators, instead of national policy, the arbiter. Mr. Nelson's troubles with the military have been the most notorious. Now he is put on the same level as the heads of the armed services, as at the time of his appointment we felt he should be. The heads of the Food Administration, of the War Manpower Commission, of the Office of Price Administration, and the Shipping Board are not so fortunate. That they are not put on Mr. Nelson's level is doubtless due to the fact that their problems can be threshed out by Judge Vinson as director of economic stabilization. Moreover, as under the British war cabinet system, they may be called into the War Cabinet to participate in the deliberations as well as for purposes of consultation.

This, then, is an important step in arresting the muddle in our war administration. But there has been so much delay, so many bad practices have been congealed, that a long time must elapse before order and a real national policy can be restored. To this end Mr. Byrnes will doubtless build up a secretariat on the British and Canadian models. Unification of the war administration requires more than the restoration of discipline. All the agencies must be kept informed of what the rest are doing in order to avoid waste of effort. The OWM, in other words, must inform as well as be informed. Then there will be no such duplication as the parallel orders which were issued recently by OPA and WPB on hosiery standardization. The task of making the war administration cohere is likely to tax all the organizational ability of Mr. Byrnes.

Rome And Moscow

For a good many weeks Washington has been full of rumors about an impending rapprochement between the Roman Catholic Church and the government of Soviet Russia, incredible as such a thing might seem. The names of both Archbishop Spellman of New York, who is still abroad and at last report in the Middle East, and of the Jesuit Father Gannon, president of Fordham University, lately returned from Europe, are frequently mentioned in this connection. Rumor has assigned them prominent roles in the delicate diplomatic maneuvering that would certainly precede any such understanding.

It would appear, however, that these rumors are based more on inference and deduction from recent events than on any explicit information. The German hierarchy in a recent manifesto bitterly attacked the Nazi party and the Gestapo for their refusal to conciliate Catholics in the occupied countries or to allow them the ministrations of even German priests. The Russian radio has denounced the German persecution of Catholics in Baltic Europe. The Comintern, or international revolutionary agency of the Communist Party, has been suddenly dissolved. Hopes for the restoration of Christianity in Russia have been voiced by the Vatican radio. Meanwhile the Nazis have abruptly abandoned their pose as defenders of Christian Europe against Bolshevist barbarism, and have begun to accuse the Pope and the curia of having instigated the whole war. Are these things mere coincidences, or do they fit into a pattern indicative of things to come?

The advantages that a concordat or modus vivendi between the Church and the Soviets might hold for both sides are fairly obvious. With the partition of Poland in 1939 millions of Polish, Esthonian, and Lithuanian Catholics of the Latin rite as well as numerous Ukrainian and White Russian Uniats passed into the jurisdiction of the Soviets. Most of this territory is now in German hands, but from the German administration, as the statement of the German bishops plainly reveals, nothing is to be hoped for. Moreover, it is now obvious even to the most cautious of Vatican diplomatists that Germany has lost the war and that Russia will have a powerful voice in the affairs of the new Europe. Finally, there is the question of the Russian Orthodox Church, still extant despite two decades of persecution and, according to some reports, increasing in membership. Since the pontificate of Pius XI reconciliation and reunion with the Eastern Churches has been an important object of Vatican policy. The Soviets would have even more to gain politically by coming to an arrangement with the Vatican. For a good many years to come Russia will need help from both the American continent, and a concordat with the Vatican would certainly remove most of the potential opposition in both North and South America to such assistance.

However, the obstacles in the way of a concordat seem quite as great as the advantages to be gained by it. It is unlikely that the Church will be satisfied merely with the enforcement of the article of the Stalinist constitution which guarantees religious freedom and to which Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Davies seem to attach great importance as a formula for agreement. The Church would certainly insist upon the right not only to practice but also to teach religion, something now forbidden under Soviet law. Finally, there is the doctrinal opposition, reiterated by Pope Pius XII as recently as last Christmas Eve, to the Marxist and Leninist principles on which, theoretically at least, the whole Soviet state is organized.

NIGHTFALL

Look how the leaves are spilling on the air;
From summer, facing fall, the heart bereft
And cold looks back to what it did not dare.
Look how the lashing oceans of the night
Beat on the shores of men, distant, alone.
The flood upon him now, he takes no flight,
But hugs for comfort this indifferent stone.

The trees cut down, the friendships lost and over,
The taste of bitter grief, the fading hand—
All covered like the dark and windy clover
That has been burnt by autumn's chilly brand . . .
Night and our griefs together—see! They mark
The tall horizons sinking into dark.

Good Neighbors

Neutral Argentina

ARGENTINA CELEBRATED her Independence Day Tuesday, and if anything can bring home to her people the realities that they must face as result of permitting the Castillo government to lead them or force them into their present world position, the events of this day should.

Argentina played a magnificent role in freeing the New World from European tyranny. As a republic, she has been a valiant champion of fair dealing among nations. She has led a fight against aggression and force as instruments of national policy. She has traditionally been looked up to for this by all the weaker Latin-American nations, and the anniversary of her independence has always been marked by warm congratulations and expressions of friendship from them.

But the 133d anniversary of her declaration of independence found Argentina led, or forced, by a small clique to keep "prudent neutrality" in a way that threatens the New World from both east and west. The day brought two significant developments. First, congratulations to the Castillo government from Hitler and the Emperor of Japan were conspicuous by their presence. Second, the usual warm expressions from Latin-American sister republics were conspicuously lacking.

Mexican Radio

Mexican radio comment keynoted New World sentiment in saying that on Argentina's national birthday Latin America looked with grave inquietude on her war role, while admiring Brazil's vigorous leadership.

Both these statements are undeniably true. Within recent weeks the Argentine government has plainly shown unfriendliness to the democratic cause by two specific actions. First, they suppressed another prodemocratic paper, La Vanguardia. Second, they have permitted German merchants in Buenos Aires to launch their "Red List," an open attempt to organize commercial reprisals against Argentines who want their country to go into the war with the democracies. At the same time, a campaign in the unrestricted pro-Nazi press has been accusing the United States of wanting to "enslave Argentina economically."

When every other nation in the New World is actually repressing every form of pro-Nazi and subversive activity, these actions indeed cause grave concern.

There can be no doubt, either, that Brazil, even during the war, is rapidly taking the leadership Argentina once held. She is still pushing her railroad into Bolivia, extending a line toward Paraguay and increasing her financial cooperation with both nations. She is completing the steel industry that will enable her to supply neighboring nations and increase her own manufacturing. Brazil will be South America's industrial dynamo after the war.

But the Castillo government is not only forfeiting Argentine leadership in Latin America. It is also seriously prejudicing Argentina's future relations with the rest of the world in a very specific way.

The Castillo group has always depended on the world's need for Argentina's food products. Their population of 13 million can produce enough wheat, corn and meat to feed an estimated 40 million people. They have from the first calculated that this food-producing capacity would necessarily give them a voice in world affairs when it came to settling the peace. They reasoned that they could stay out of the war at will, but could not be spared from the peace.

Food Conference

Things are not working out just that way. It is the nations that fought the war and that broke relations with the Axis who are going to influence the postwar period decisively for a good long time to come. This is not a prophecy. They are already arranging it. The International Food Conference now in session at Hot Springs is planning conditions of the world's food distribution after the war. Argentina, the neutral who counted on food as her ace card, is not there.

The food conference is only the first of many. There will be meetings on monetary matters, on trade, and "neutrals" will have no part in making agreements that will settle world conditions after the fighting ends.

The Argentines are not going to like this. The Buenos Aires newspaper, La Critica, last week protested editorially against Argentina's "exclusion" from the food conference, and they will protest again.

Argentina has not been nor will be "excluded" from anything. Her absence from the food conference is an automatic result of the Castillo policy of holding apart and temporizing with the enemy. We know the clique, and not the people, are doing this, but the practical effect is the same. And for whatever further consequences Argentines may have to face, in the last analysis, they will have only themselves to blame. For the only way that any people can hope to help the United Nations write the peace is to have their government support these nations effectively in the war.

The Seas Unite

By Barnet Nover

Is The U-Boat Being Curbed?

THE SEAS that unite us divide our enemies. That is the fact of facts in this, the forty-fifth, month of the war.

The Axis has done everything possible to reverse that situation. It has sought with might and main, and never more energetically than during the past year and a half, to separate us from Great Britain, Great Britain from her dominions and empire, the British and American arsenals from the Russian and African fighting fronts.

At the same time Hitler and his Japanese and Italian allies have tried desperately to bridge the gap separating Germany and Japan, the resources of conquered Europe and the resources of the fabulously rich regions overrun by the minions of the Mikado.

THIS LATTER effort can now be written off as a dead loss to the Axis.

Last summer and fall a great army of German and Axis satellite troops which had swept across the Don into the Caucasus smashed its head against the stone wall of Russian resistance at Stalingrad. And in the great Russian counteroffensive that followed, further distance was placed between the Germans and the Persian Gulf, the ultimate goal of their 1942 offensive.

Similarly, Rommel's great drive across Egypt, a drive which brought him and a large German-Italian force almost to the gates of Alexandria, failed to produce the intended results.

The Suez Canal and the Red Sea passageway between the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean were saved for the Allies. Now the Axis is in process of losing the whole of the Mediterranean.

NO SUCH SWEEPING victory has yet been won by the Allies in the battle of the Atlantic supply lines.

That battle is, in fact, not likely to end until the war ends. That was true in the 1914-1918 conflict and history will probably repeat itself in this respect. But now, for the first time in 18 months, the possibility exists that henceforth the menace of the U-boat will be progressively curbed.

Last year, according to an estimate published by the Navy, Allied shipping losses exceeded new construction by around one million tons. In other words, at the end of the year we had fewer ships to carry supplies and reinforcements to the far-flung fighting fronts than we had at the beginning.

Yet the number of these fronts increased rather than diminished during 1942 and their individual needs grew rather than declined.

DURING THE FIRST three months of the present year Allied shipping losses remained heavy. The worst month was March, which was, in fact, one of the worst months of the entire war for Allied shipping. Yet by March the total construction of new tonnage in Allied (mainly American) yards had surpassed all previous records by a great margin.

Early this spring, therefore, it was by no means certain whether the race between sinkings and construction would be won by us or by our enemies.

IT IS YET too early to say that we have won that race. But it does appear that we are winning it.

In April even the Axis had to admit that a sharp decline in the total tonnage sunk by U-boats had taken place. This was encouraging. But it was not conclusive. The cautious view was that the decline had been due to temporary factors.

One explanation, for instance, was that Hitler, being extremely anxious at all costs to prolong the Tunisian campaign into the summer, had sent into the Atlantic a far greater proportion of Germany's total U-boat strength than was normally employed, hence during April the number of U-boats in the Atlantic was abnormally small, the remainder being laid up for repairs and to give the crews time to rest and recuperate.

BUT IT NOW APPEARS that Allied shipping losses for May may be no greater, if as great, than for April. If that is so, and the Nazis themselves are hinting that it is so, we may be witnessing a fundamental alteration in the balance of power in the Atlantic, one capable of having a profound bearing on the course and duration of the war.

On the offensive side it has taken the form of hammering away at German plants manufacturing U-boat parts, at the yards where the U-boats are assembled, at U-boat nests in the Baltic and along the Atlantic Coast and at the U-boats actually at sea.

Defensively, the emphasis has been on increased ship production and on an expansion, as rapidly as possible, of Allied escort strength. The circumstance that for close to two months U-boat depredations have declined suggests that these measures have been successful.

In the meantime, success has been achieved by the Allies in their war against Axis blockade runners carrying rubber and tin, quinine and edible oils from the Japanese Empire to Hitler's Europe and machines, machine tools, dyestuffs and specialty products that Hitler has been sending from Europe to Japan.

More than ever, therefore, the isolation of Germany and Japan from each other and from the rest of the world is being enforced. More than ever the seven seas link the United Nations. There is no greater harbinger of victory.

Japanese-Americans

It is regrettable that loyal Americans of Japanese ancestry are placed in an unenviable light by certain public commentators, but it is more to be regretted that these commentators are so short-sighted that they sow the seed of racial prejudice at a time when it is detrimental to the war effort and national unity.

Representing the volunteers for the special Japanese-American combat team of the United States Army, who represent the loyalty of a great majority of American-born Japanese in the Minidoka Relocation Center, I take strong exception to the statements broadcast in a series of radio programs from San Francisco accusing and condemning the Nisei as being disloyal.

We take pride in our American heritage. Ours is the loyalty that fears not the supreme sacrifice. Ours is a determination founded upon faith in America to preserve the blessings of democracy for ourselves and our children's children. Race prejudice, discontent and disunity at home can only mean a stab in the back to us who are willing to shed our life's blood for the cause of America. Our cause is greater than issues of race for the perpetuation of our American way of life against the forces of aggression and dictatorship. As the President said when he approved the Army combat team of Nisei, "The principle on which this country was founded and by which it has always been governed is that Americanism is a matter of the mind and heart; Americanism is not and never was a matter of race or ancestry. A good American is one who is loyal to this country, to our creed of liberty and democracy.

Essential Driving!

A great deal is being said about the iniquitous pleasure driver, and much editorial enthusiasm expressed over the present crackdown. It is intimated that the silly business of giving every car owner an A ration for uncontrolled use is well dispensed with. Hope is voiced that many unnecessary autos will now be retired from use. Down with those dirty dogs, the A drivers! Hurray for the essential drivers!

For 12 months I have been an A driver. My mileage for this period, not counting 1000 miles of travel under official orders, has been just under 3000, in contrast to my normal 8000 per year. Have B and C drivers suffered a comparable cut in their driving for pleasure and convenience, strictly essential driving omitted?

For two months I have existed on 1.37 gallons per week, a mileage of 22 per week, or 1140 per year. Will any B or C driver claim that his mileage of driving for convenience, leaving out again his strictly essential driving, has been cut to one-seventh of his prewar pleasure and convenience driving?

How many B and C drivers will give oath that all driving they will do after gas becomes available again is strictly essential. Why do half the cars on Lee Boulevard in the morning have but one or two occupants? How can a friend of mine get 150 gallons a month on his unsupported statement that he has to drive 100 miles a day on Navy business, leaving him with such a surplus of coupons that he is able to give them to his friends? Why can other friends of mine get gas to drive to work when they could just as easily use public transportation—and frequently do, when they want to save the gas for pleasure driving? Why may persons burn up 5 gallons a day, just so that they may indulge their taste for living in Warrenton or Leesburg while stationed here?

This convenience ration has made and will continue to make greater inroads into our gasoline supply than all the wicked night club, billiard parlor, corner movie, and miscellaneous social driving ever have. What is worse, it exists without a word of OPA or editorial disapproval. Pleasure is black, and essential driving is white, and anybody who says he is white gets gas.

I have been in favor of strict gas rationing since before it was started. I thought the 4-gallon A ration was too much, the 2-gallon ration ample, the present half ration a little low; 2 gallons a week for social and miscellaneous driving is about right.

While the present shortage of supplies continues, I am in complete agreement that pleasure driving should rightly stop. But if and when supplies return to normal, I think it will be high time OPA wielded a firm scissors on B and C books, to make sure that no B or C coupon is being used for a job that ride-sharing or public transportation could perform, or its holder could divert it to pleasurable uses.

Gas For Physicians

The doctors of our society have undergone considerable inconveniences during the gasoline shortage in trying to discharge their obligations to the sick. Many of our physicians have been unable to make any calls for the past three days and some report that they have actually had to neglect seriously ill patients. Wherever gasoline is available it requires so much of the physician's time to get in line and take his turn that in some instances office hours have had to be canceled.

With your support it seems as though something can be done to prevent this recurring of these conditions. Perhaps one of the many filling stations which have been closed for some months could be reopened for physicians and an emergency supply of gas placed there for use in such times as these. The physician, of course, should be required to sign for the amount of gasoline, give the number of the license which permits him to practice medicine in the District, and whatever other data necessary for his protection.

Pearl Harbor Mission

("All but five of the ships sunk at Pearl Harbor are ready for service again"—News Item.)

We are the Fleet of the Hero Dead
The ships that would live no more!
The ghosts of the vessels the foeman said
Would never return to war;
Battered and burned in a sneak attack,
Blasted and sent below,
We are the ships of the Fleet Come Back
With vows to return the blow!

Twisted and torn in a holocaust,
Harbored by Davy Jones;
Skeleton hulks that were all but lost,
Stripped to their gaunt, bare bones;
"Done for" the Jappies they cried loudly,
Proud of their deeds of shame . . .
Onward we sail on a rising tide
Vengeance our only aim!

Some in the muck with their gasping wounds,
Some on the ocean's floor,
Stricken and maimed where the white surf pounds,
Red with our heroes' gore;
We are the Fleet That Came Back From Hell,
Bound to make Nippon pay——
Fit for the job that we know full well,
Back to avenge the day!

Battleship, cruiser and gunboats, each,
Dead of a Sunday morn,
Buried afar where the seagulls screech
Never to be reborn! . . .
This was the hope of the enemy,
Now must he change his tune . . .
Grimly the Ghost Fleet puts out to sea
Vengeance to get, and soon!

Mark the Nevada and Tennessee——
There with their sister ships!
Back from the anguish and infamy,
Eager to come to grips;
We are the Ghosts of a fighting bunch
Out to avenge the blow,
Packing a wallop and lethal punch
Waiting the cry, "Let's go!"

We are the Ships That Came Back From Hell,
Back from the sea's junk heap;
Red with the blood of the boys who fell;
(Pleasant we'll make their sleep!)
We're the Flotilla That Sails Again——
Anchors aweigh! Aweigh!
Hunting once more on the broad blue main——
Boy, we've a debt to pay!

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Italy At Bay

THE STAGE is set for the grand climax of the Italian drama. Rarely, if ever before, has a great nation been in such a tragic position. For the fundamental and permanent national interests of Italy are bound up with the defeat of her ally, with the destruction of the Greater Germany on the northern land frontier of Italy. Thus the Italians who are dying in battle are laying down their lives for a cause which is fatally opposed to the vital interests of their country.

LIPPMANN

Yet while the Italian forces continue to resist, and to occupy the Balkans and a portion of Southern France, the Allies must subject Italy to devastating attack. In the course of this attack, if the resistance is prolonged, it may well happen that we shall strike such annihilating blows at the Italian economy that Italy, though liberated, will find it hard to recover. For the air bombardment today is only the prelude. It is only the reduction of strategic positions from which the heart of Italy will be laid open to mortal blows.

THIS TERRIBLE dilemma could only be resolved by the action of Italian patriots who were ready for the sake of the future of Italy to take the risk of breaking with Germany and of throwing themselves on the mercy of the Allies. The Fascist propaganda may, and will, and no doubt must, deny that Italy can be saved only by an Allied victory. But Italians, who are not personally entangled in the crimes of the Fascist politicians, know that it is true. They know it not because the British and the Americans say it. They know it though we said not a word about it. They know it from their own history and their own deepest national instinct.

Even Mussolini knows it. He knows it so well that he is incapable of rallying the Italian nation in this supreme crisis. For at a time like this a nation can be rallied, as Britain was in 1940 and Russia in 1941, only if the leaders and their people believe that they are fighting for their country and their homes. Mussolini, though he is a great orator, cannot rally Italy today. He cannot do it because, under all his Fascist demagogy and knavery, he is not a self-righteous alien fanatic like Hitler, but an intelligent, though unscrupulous, Italian. Being Italian and intelligent, Mussolini knows perfectly well that when he let Germany establish herself on the Italian frontier, he betrayed the national interests of Italy, and his own convictions as well. Mussolini may be sick, fat, and old. But what cramps his style hopelessly today is the knowledge of his own criminal blundering.

WE HAVE his own words and acts to prove it. They are well known, because they are self-evident, to all Italian patriots. On May 20, 1925, when Mussolini was already the Duce, he addressed the Italian Senate on the subject of the pan-German propaganda for the annexation of Austria: "Italy would never be able to tolerate," he said, "such a patent violation of treaties" which "would frustrate Italy's victory in 1918 by weakening the national frontier on the Brenner; and finally by augmenting Germany's manpower and territorial position to the point of making that country the most powerful bloc in central Europe."

Nine years later, in July 1934, he still held the same obvious Italian opinion. Hitler had just committed his first important murder on foreign soil—the murder of the Austrian Chancellor, Dolfuss,—as a preparation for the annexation of Austria. Mussolini sent a telegram to the Austrian Vice Chancellor, Schuschnigg, saying "the independence of Austria, for which Dolfuss fell, is a principle which Italy has defended and which she will defend even more energetically."

It was only after he had made a dirty secret deal with Laval about Ethiopia that he got himself so entangled with Hitler that he could no longer defend the national security of Italy. Then the Italian tragedy began.

THE PRIMARY national interest of Italy—that Germany should not be her neighbor on the Brenner—can and will be achieved by one of the indubitable aims of the United Nations. This is the liberation and restoration of Austria.

There can be no doubt that this commitment—essential to the health of Europe—will be fulfilled. For it is not only Italy that needs an independent Austria. The Balkan states need it. The Danubian states need it. Even Germany needs it if Germany is ever to take her place in European society again. For Austria is the seat of German culture in its most civilized form, and the living proof, therefore, that Germans as such are neither a master race nor congenitally barbarians.

THERE ARE some who are inclined to shake their heads and say that there is no future for such small states as Austria. But the event will show that they are mistaken.

Far from their being antiquated, the small states flourish when the world is securely at peace.

So, the more certain the great military powers of our alliance make it that they will maintain the peace, the more surely will the small states be able to maintain and enjoy their independence. It is only when they are pawns in the power politics of great states, or when they try to act as if they were themselves great military states, that the small ones become ultra-nationalistic and insolvent.

The Gallup Poll

Princeton, N. J., May 28.—Despite the role which American forces played in the victory in Tunisia, the British people consider that America's contribution so far toward winning the war is far less than that of Russia, or Britain, or even China.

The average Briton puts Russia at the head of the list of the four leading United Nations as having played the most important part to date in bringing eventual victory.

The survey asked the British public:

In your opinion, which country has so far made the greatest contribution toward winning the war—Russia, Britain, the United States, or China?

The vote is:

Russia	58%
Britain	42
China	5
United States	3

Most of the interviewing in the survey was completed before Prime Minister Churchill's address to Congress in Washington in which he emphasized the magnitude of the war burden Russia is carrying in comparison to Britain or the United States.

Meanwhile, the majority of the British people are taking a fairly optimistic view on the probable length of the war.

British Institute surveys just completed show that nearly 6 Britons out of every 10 (56 per cent) think the war will be over in 18 months or less, although about one-sixth think it will last three years or more.

The latest results are:

How much longer do you think the war will last?

Six months	7%
1 year	27
1½ years	22
2 years	26
3 years	9
More than 3 years	6
Undecided	3

New Agency Directive

War Mobilization Plan

Texts of President Roosevelt's statement on creation of the Office of War Mobilization and the executive order follow:

Statement by the President

To unify more closely the work of the war agencies concerned with the production, procurement, transportation and distribution of military and civilian supplies, materials and products, I am creating the Office of War Mobilization which will be under the direction of Justice James F. Byrnes.

Justice Byrnes will be assisted by a War Mobilization Committee composed of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Chairman of the Munitions Assignment Board, the Chairman of the War Production Board and the Economic Stabilization Director. The committee has been purposely kept small so that it can function most effectively. But the heads of the various departments and agencies will be asked to sit with the committee whenever matters of special concern to their departments or agencies are under consideration.

The committee will lay down unified policies and develop integrated programs and will see that the policies established and programs developed are expedited. In addition to its regular meetings, the committee will meet from time to time with me in the Cabinet Room.

We are entering a phase of the war effort when we must streamline our activities, avoid duplication and overlapping, eliminate interdepartmental friction, make decisions with dispatch, and keep both our military machine and our essential civilian economy running in team and at high speed.

Justice Byrnes is resigning as economic stabilization director to become director of the Office of War Mobilization. Judge Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky, now a member of the United States Court of Appeals, will succeed Justice Byrnes as economic stabilization director. Judge Vinson was a member of Congress for 14 years and for 8 years of that period a member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

EXECUTIVE ORDER

Providing for the establishment of an Office of War Mobilization.

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes of the United States, particularly by the First War Powers Act, 1941, as President of the United States and as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and in order to provide for the more effective coordination of the mobilization of the Nation for war, it is hereby ordered as follows:

I.

There is established in the Office of Emergency Management of the Executive Office of the President an Office of War Mobilization which shall be under the direction of a Director of War Mobilization (hereinafter referred to as director, to be appointed by the President.

II.

There is established in the Office of War Mobilization the War Mobilization Committee (hereinafter referred to as the committee), of which the director shall be the chairman and with which he shall advise and consult. The committee shall consist, in addition to the director, of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the chairman of the Munitions Assignments Board, the chairman of the War Production Board, and the director of Economic Stabilization. The chairman shall request the heads of other agencies or departments to participate in the deliberations of the committee whenever matter specially affecting such agencies or departments are under consideration. It shall be the duty of the heads of the agencies and departments to supply necessary data to the director and the committee.

III.

It shall be the function of the Office of War Mobilization, acting in consultation with the committee and subject to the direction and control of the President.

(a) To develop unified programs and to establish policies for the maximum use of the Nation's natural and industrial resources for military and civilian needs, for the effective use of the national manpower not in the armed forces, for the maintenance and stabilization of the civilian economy, and for the adjustment of such economy to war needs and conditions.

(b) To unify the activities of Federal agencies and departments engaged in or concerned with production, procurement, distribution or transportation of military or civilian supplies, materials, and products and to resolve and determine controversies between such agencies or departments, except those to be resolved by the director of economic stabilization under Section 3, Title IV, of Executive Order 9250; and

(c) To issue such directives on policy or operations to the Federal agencies and departments as may be necessary to carry out the programs developed, the policies established, and the decisions made under this order. It shall be the duty of all such agencies and departments to execute these directives and to make to the Office of War Mobilization such progress reports as may be required.

IV.

The Office of War Mobilization may perform the functions, exercise the powers, authority and discretion conferred on it by this order through such officials and such agencies and in such manner as the director, subject to the provisions of this order, may determine. The director shall receive such compensation as the President shall provide, and within the limits of funds which may be made available may employ necessary personnel and make provision for supplies, facilities and services necessary to discharge his responsibilities.

All prior executive orders insofar as they are in conflict herewith are amended accordingly.

Subsidies Opposed

Davis Sees Peril In Plan

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In announcing its intention to roll back the retail prices of meat, butter and coffee by subsidizing the processors of these commodities, the Administration acted hastily and without consulting its War Food Administrator, a Senate Agriculture subcommittee heard yesterday.

Chester C. Davis, the WFA chief to whom farm organizations and many Congressmen would give complete food pricing and rationing control, told the subcommittee he heard of the subsidy program first when Price Administrator Prentiss Brown made a radio speech saying it would be put into effect June 1.

If he had been asked, he made it clear, he would not have selected butter and meat as subsidy targets.

Sees Subsidy Menace

Under questioning directed by Senator McNary (Republican) of Oregon, Davis declared he believed "general dependence on a broad subsidy program as the chief implement in holding prices would be dangerous."

"I do not think we have the domestic conditions to brace such a program" he said, adding that "you simply cannot make subsidies a chief weapon in the fight against inflation."

He reiterated his belief in the "rationing of spending power" and declared subsidies should be used when they would be an encouragement to production. For instance, he said, they should be utilized to increase the country's vegetable oil crops.

Treasury Payment Backed

Senator McNary asked if it wouldn't be better for the consumer to pay the subsidy, rather than the Treasury. Davis replied he believed there were instances in which the money should be taken from the Treasury rather than from the consumer's pocket.

Meantime the subcommittee introduced legislation to prohibit payments of subsidies for food products without congressional authorization.

Senator Bushfield (Republican), of South Dakota, a sponsor of the measure, said it would keep the Administration "from going ahead with its attempt to bolster up and preserve inequities in the price structure by paying general subsidies whenever it sees fit."

The legislation was not interpreted, however, as a move to prevent the meat, butter and coffee program from being put into effect. Mechanics for this program, to be financed from funds already available to the RFC, are still being worked out.

Similar to Cheese Subsidy

Indications yesterday were the butter subsidy would work somewhat like the cheese subsidy put into effect by the Department of Agriculture to encourage production when cheese prices were frozen at "abnormally low" levels. Handled by the Dairy Products Marketing Association out of Chicago, cheese subsidy checks are reaching the processors on time and although the industry still dislikes the idea the program is said to be "working out mechanically."

A marked difference in the butter subsidy is that it accompanies a rollback in the retail price and no method of subsidizing inventories has been arrived at. Dairy leaders said yesterday that "a loss to the industry looks inevitable to us."

Mechanics of the meat subsidy are agreed to be much more complex and "right now are all tied up in knots."

Price Administrator Brown yesterday indicated there would be no turning back in the subsidy program as already announced.

"We are confronted with the choice of rolling back the cost of living to the levels we were directed to hold or permit an adjustment of wages and other income in line with the increase in the cost of living," he said. "If we take the latter course, we shall be giving ground again just as we have given ground before."

In this situation, he declared, the OPA is "retaking the price ground we have lost." Once the cost of living as a whole is brought to the level of last September 15, he said, he is "determined it shall be held there."

WFA Widens Control Over Potatoes

The War Food Administration yesterday established control over shipments of potatoes from 90 additional counties in the Southeast.

The permit-for-shipment plan, already in effect in Maine and five Southern counties, is a weapon for obtaining essential supplies for the armed forces, WFA said, and also makes for "equitable distribution" of purchases.

Levy to Stand, Tax Leaders Say

By Francis M. Lemay
Associated Press Staff Writer

Congressional tax leaders held out hope to America's taxpayers yesterday that no new Federal taxes or rate increases on old levies will be made applicable this year.

Strong sentiment appeared to be developing against "retroactive" taxation.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina said the House Ways and Means Committee will consider a new general revenue bill "as soon as practicable," but expressed a personal view that it might be best to make any increased rates or new taxes effective in 1944, instead of retroactively for 1943.

Representative Knutson of Minnesota, House Republican tax spokesman, said:

"We're not going to have any more retroactive tax bills. We did that last year, and there were all sorts of inequities."

Congress enacted the biggest tax bill in history last fall, and made it applicable as of January 1, 1942.

Knutson told newspapermen that House-Senate conferees who worked out the compromise pay-as-you-go bill had a "gentleman's agreement" against further increases in individual income tax rates in the next two years. Some legislators said the Federal retail sales tax undoubtedly will be considered.

Doughton, long-time foe of such a sales tax, said he would favor it "only as a last resort" to finance the war. He took a similar stand toward any compulsory savings proposal, and emphasized that the voluntary bond purchase program had gained public support.

It is understood that the three ranking Democrats and three ranking Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee soon will visit Treasury Secretary Morgenthau to discuss and explore the wartime revenue problem.

Lewis Still Wants $2

No Progress

John L. Lewis stuck to his guns yesterday and insisted again on payment for 90 minutes of "travel time" at time and a half rates—enough extra compensation, according to his calculations, to give every miner in the country a $2 a day wage increase.

It was reported that the operators explored various alternative proposals without significant result—an indication that no progress was made in resumed collective bargaining conferences.

The conferences adjourned again until 10 a. m. today. Lewis has scheduled a meeting of the United Mine Workers Policy Committee for 12:15 p. m. today to discuss negotiations.

When the policy committee meeting was scheduled originally, the hope was expressed that it would be able to act on a new contract today.

However, both operators and miners agreed that progress made thus far indicated that this development was unlikely.

The conferences are working against two deadlines—a Monday midnight end to the extended strike truce and a June 15 deadline on bargaining negotiations when the parties are to report back to the War Labor Board, in accordance with its orders.

Observers believed that Lewis would find some formula to secure an extension of the strike truce before the Monday midnight deadline. He extended it once before on the invitation of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who has been operating the country's coal mines under presidential order since the May general coal strike.

The operators have suggested tentatively that the miners compromise on a payment for 48 minutes "travel time," 80 cents a day pay if calculated at straight time rates. WLB has already ordered a number of concessions totaling 25 cents a day a miner.

WLB ordered resumption of collective bargaining negotiations for a 15-day period on the miners' demand for "portal-to-portal" pay, including all "travel time" spent going to and from the mine entrance. WLB acted on the assumption that this demand represented a potential legal claim against the operators which might be settled by collective bargaining.

Woman Welding Championship Won by Slim Ex-Waitress of 19

By the Associated Press

Pascagoula, Miss., May 28.—Blue-eyed Vera Anderson abandoned a waitress' tray to "carry the torch" for Uncle Sam and today carried that same welder's torch to a national championship.

The slim, 19-year-old girl, an employe of the local Ingalls Shipyard, defeated the best from Henry J. Kaiser's Oregon Shipyard to become "Woman Welding Champion of America."

Her opponent was Mrs. Hermina Strmiska, a former housewife who learned welding from her husband.

Dressed in khaki coveralls and working inside a roped-off square at Ingalls yard, the ladies ignored a hot summer sun—and each other—until the test was completed. The competition was divided into two periods. During a rest interval the women sat in opposite corners of the square, listening impatiently to veteran men welders acting as "seconds."

"I felt like somebody's prize pug," Miss Anderson said afterward. "But I've never been so proud of anything in my life as I am of the championship."

Judging was based on time and quality.

Miss Anderson's time was 24 minutes 46 2-5 seconds as she scored 95.55 per cent on quality. Mrs. Strmiska rated 93.50 per cent on quality, finished in 29 minutes 9 4-5 seconds.

The winner's victory yielded $350 in War Bonds, a massive 2-foot-high silver championship trophy and a trip to Washington this weekend for a visit at the White House with Mrs. Roosevelt. The loser got $150 in War Bonds.

Sunday Bus Service

As part of the plan to conserve gasoline during this critical shortage, Capital Transit must adjust its Sunday Bus service commensurate with the cuts already made in its week-day Bus service. Beginning this Sunday and continuing every other Sunday during the emergency period those who must ride on Sunday can cooperate by:

1. Use Street Cars instead of Buses. If you are within walking distance of a Street Car line, walk to the Street Car line.
2. Walk to your destination where you can.
3. Have your fare ready when you board, move to the rear and exit promptly through the center doors.
4. Allow yourself plenty of time to reach your destination. This means allowing for delays that will result because of emergency conditions and shorter routes.

CAPITAL TRANSIT COMPANY

Our Information Department, MIchigan 6363, Ext. 572, will be glad to answer your questions concerning week-day or Sunday service.

'Mission to Moscow' Now On Screen at the Earle

Controversial Film Proves Its Worth As Interesting and Exciting Entertainment; Brief Stage Revue a Colorful Diversion

"MISSION TO MOSCOW," the Warner Brothers' much-discussed picturization of the book by former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, yesterday opened its regular run on the screen at the Earle Theater and aroused the enthusiasm to be expected of so impressive an achievement in picture-making.

Both Mr. Davies' introductory to the film and the apostrophe to postwar world freedom, spoken by Walter Huston at its end, were greeted with spontaneous applause. The intervening, major action of a film which ostensibly recounts with authority developments of vital importance in world affairs both entertained and informed those who viewed it with eager attention.

A picture peopled by so vast a cast and presenting so great a variety of scene and incident could hardly do less. Apart from all the charges of "propaganda," inaccuracy and false statement that have been leveled against it, "Mission to Moscow" unfolds a factual story as interesting as, and frequently more exciting than, any fictional creation. It moves rapidly, is skillfully directed, acted with exceptional competence and produced upon a mammoth scale. There is not an element of engrossing dramatic entertainment that does not assert itself at one time or another as the story of Mrs. Davies' visualized diaries and official reports progresses.

The session of the League of Nations, in which Emperor Haile Selassie makes his futile appeal and Maxim Litvinoff pleads for unity of defense among the nations opposed to Fascist aggression; the scorn with which Ambassador Davies' suggestion of arms limitations are received in Berlin, while he is en route to Moscow, and other incidents in the early sequences of the picture are prophetic of the war now scourging the globe. The reflection of life in Soviet Russia, the wide sweep and mobility of its heavy industries and the revelation of the Stalin government as one dedicated to peace and international amity provide both enlivenment and enlightenment—accepting the author's word that events are pictured as he saw them, with only slight concessions to "dramatic license."

It is a panorama of the world moving toward war, executed with such comprehensiveness that a detailed recital of all it contains could not be held within the space limitations of a brief review.

There are intervals during the film's slightly more than two hours of running time when the exposition of essential facts assumes the form of a "documentary." There are others in which a shrewd blending of humor, warm human relations and the subtle workings of duplicity and intrigue provide drama of the most gripping sort. One of the high points is reached in the "purge trials" that have drawn the sharpest lines of controversy as to the validity of the film as an "historical document." Whatever question of their authenticity may be raised, they provide the excitement of the tensest "courtroom drama" to be found in fiction. There is ground for legitimate argument in everything but the film's unimpeachable power to interest and entertain.

A Miracle of Efficient Casting

With literally hundreds in the cast, it is amazing that "Mission to Moscow" should be interpreted with such uniform excellence and understanding.

Among the great number of important figures involved, several portrayals stand out as remarkably faithful impersonations. Foremost among these are Oscar Homolka's astonishingly lifelike assumption of the role of Maxim Litvinoff, present Soviet Ambassador to the United States; Victor Francen's Vyshinsky, Gene Lockhart's Molotov and, of course, Walter Huston's intelligent and forceful portrayal of Ambassador Davies, in which no attempt has been made to look like or "imitate" the central figure in all the pictured events. The skill of one of the theater's most able actors has made Oscar Homolka's Litvinoff photographic in its resemblance to the original, not alone in appearance, but in voice, mannerisms and intellectual force. By no means so much can be said for Mannart Kippen's Stalin or Dudley Field Malone's Churchill, except possibly in the matter of vague physical resemblance.

The honors of the picture, however, are not wholy masculine. Ann Harding is poised and charming as Mrs. Davies and two vivacious performances are contributed by Eleanor Parker, as Emlen Davies, and Maria Palmer, as Tanya Litvinoff. Barbara Everest appears as Mrs. Litvinoff and Frieda Inescourt lends grace, beauty and spirit to the role of Mme. Molotov.

In the huge ensemble, recruited from every stratum of the social scale, George Tobias, Helmut Dantine, Henry Daniell, Roman Bohnen, Moroni Olsen, Vladimir Sokoloff, Maurice Schwartz, Charles Trowbridge, in his traditional role of Secretary Hull, and an uncounted number of others are conspicuous and capable.

The merit of Michael Curtiz's direction and Bert Glennon's photography matches the magnitude of their task.

The brief but colorful stage revue perpetuates the screen's Russian motif in costuming and setting. Introduced by Jo Lombardi's "Songs of the Red Army," the diversion is put under way behind the footlights by the Roxyettes in a picturesque "Russian Show Girls" number, quickly followed by Paul Sydell and his marvelously trained dogs. The Roxyettes' shimmeringly beautiful "Feather Ballet" serves as a perfect introduction for the graceful artistry of Patricia Bowman, Washington's prima ballerina, in one of her most entrancing numbers, all too short in the view of yesterday's first audience. And that is all there is. It is a revue of quality rather than quantity.

"What Are We Fighting For?" the Defense Reel being universally shown this week, and an exceptionally complete newsreel resume of the last days of the Axis in Africa are the screen supplementaries of a feature film that deserves the widespread attention it has commanded.

"REVEILLE WITH BEVERLY." Columbia picturization of an original screen play by Howard J. Green, Jack Henley and Albert Duffy, starring Ann Miller, with William Wright, Dick Purcell, Franklin Pangborn, Tim Ryan, Larry Parks, Douglas Leavitt, Adele Mara, Walter Sande, Wally Vernon and Andrew Tombes, plus Bob Crosby, Freddie Slack, Duke Ellington and Count Basie and their orchestra and Frank Sinatra, the Mills Brothers and the Radio Rogues. Directed by Charles Barton.. At the Metropolitan Theater.

A considerably larger crowd than is usually drawn to a morning matinee, even in this city of staggered working hours, showed up for the opening at the Metropolitan yesterday of "Reveille With Beverly".

The reason, no doubt, has to do with the almost unprecedented number of stage, screen and radio personalities and orchestras which Columbia has packed into the film. Ann Miller, appealing young dancer, is the star of the piece, and although she only dances once, the number is a right snappy one and leaves you looking forward to seeing the young lady in something that will make more extensive use of her terpsichorean talents.

The device by which all these luminaries are assembled in one picture is a simple one. Miss Miller, as Beverly, is a radio-struck kid who operates the switchboard at a studio, dreaming the while of having a program of her own. She particularly covets a morning spot which is held by an early symphony program, but which she would like to make into a jive program.

Classics to Jive

When she gets her chance she does just that, and as she puts the recordings on the disc, they dissolve into scenes of the recording artists playing, so that, as we follow the up and downs of "Reveille With Beverly", which the show is christened by soldiers in a nearby camp, we get to see all her favorite bands in action.

The absorbed hepcats about me seemed to enjoy most Duke Ellington's recording of "8:88 Train." "Hot Dawg!" said a Negro soldier listening to "Reveille" on the screen, and "Hot Dawg!" approved a gang of adolescents down in the house.

Greeted also with enthusiasm were Bob Crosby and his band, playing "Big Noise From Winetka", and Freddie Slack's group doing "Cow Co Boogie", with pretty Ella Mae Morse on the vocals. The Mills Brothers and the Radio Rogues do themselves justice somewhere along in the proceedings.

Frank Sinatra, the young singer who has of late risen very rapidly to radio fame, turns out on the screen to be a very attractive chap, as well as an appealing singer.

Supplementaries Also Worthy

There's no great story to the picture, and many of the gags are a bit weak and overdo the business of using symphonic music as a target—but with all we've mentioned above, nobody seemed to mind.

The short subjects, incidentally, are well worth sitting through. "What Are We Fighting For?" features Lon Chaney, jr., as a guy who needed convincing that his sacrifice of morning coffee was getting him somewhere. Burgess Meredith is a rear gunner in a well-made short describing a gunner's training, and the newsreel includes films from Tunisia, showing the amazing surrender of the Germans, driving their own vehicles meekly to Allied camps and turning in their ammunition, in spite of Hitler's order to fight to the last bullet.

He's Got a Garden; Lacks the Appetite

Hollywood.—Lionel Barrymore is grateful for a vegetable garden he can't use.

Servants at his San Fernando farm decided that he ought to have a Victory Garden. So unbeknownst to the M.-G.-M. screen star they planted beets, carrots, turnips, onions and other vegetables.

"It's swell," remarked Barrymore. "Only I'm allergic to most vegetables and can eat few of them."

"That's too bad," remarked one of the servants. "We don't eat vegetables either."

Has Formula For Losing Pounds

Hollywood.—Jack Carson reported for "Animal Kingdom" weighing 30 pounds less than when he finished "Thank Your Lucky Stars." He gave this formula for losing weight:

"Take a hot bath. Don a light suit. Run down the street to visit a friend who has a particular severe case of 'flu. Take a deep breath. That's all, brother!"

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway's Pulse Beat

New York, May 28.

John Ringling North, who recently resigned as head of the Ringling Bros. circus, now carries a watch which was presented to him last year by the late Bob Davis . . . Davis, the columnist, spent one month each year in a trout-fishing vacation with Frank Munsey, Irvin Cobb and Alfred Ringling. In 1910 Ringling went to Europe and returned with this gold watch for Davis. Both their names and the date of presentation, are engraved on the back . . . On the last day of the circus engagement at Madison Square Garden, Davis gave that watch to North, who is Ringling's nephew. "It hasn't run since 1919," said Davis. "In that year, when Alf's heart stopped beating, I let the watch run down, and never wound it up again, until tonight."

J. RINGLING NORTH

Jack Thompson is the overseas correspondent for the Mutual Broadcasting System. He's back now, awaiting new assignments. Thompson's appearance is unusual, because of the beard he grew. He realizes that a beard isn't ideal adornment for a young man in Manhattan—but Thompson is helpless about it. He grew that beard in North Africa, because of the poor facilities for shaving. And now he must wear it until the war is over—because all his identification photos on the documents he carries were made while he was in Africa.

Last month the press dispatches from the West Coast reported the newest escapade of George E. Roosevelt, jr.—a strange young man, who, despite his good family background, reveled in the publicity he received by riding a horse into a night club, issuing bad checks, etc. . . . His troubled father is a respectable broker, distantly related to the White House family. George E. Roosevelt, sr., once was the trustee of a fund established for Eleanor Roosevelt. When the trust expired, he wrote to the President, asking what to do with the principal. "You're the trustee. It's your worry," the President replied . . . "I've invested the money in Government bonds," the broker then notified the President. "Now you're the trustee, and it's YOUR worry."

The new history broadcast series by Time, Inc., which will be called "1492-1942, the World and America," will have Jack Smart and Eddie Mayehoff playing leading roles. It will be a 3-times-a-week show . . . Businessmen who have to visit Washington frequently are joining their hometown Y. M. C. A. branches, because the membership card gives them entree to the Washington "Y"—and a precious bed . . . The R. A. F. officers describe their non-flying officers as "Penguins" . . . Norman, the card-reader at the Casbah, warns his customers: "I myself don't believe in fortune-telling. If anything I predict should come true, it's mere coincidence."

Princess Martha of Norway, escorted by a State Department representative while a Secret Service man stationed himself at the door, arrived at the Stork Club. The club's photographer tried to take her picture, but the State Department man intervened, and prevented him from photographing the princess . . . "I've been here many times before," Martha confessed, "and enjoyed it immensely." The Secret Service man then called a taxi, and arranged for Martha's retreat. "Yes, I always enjoyed myself," were the princess' parting words, "because I thought nobody recognized me."

Dr. Frank P. Corrigan, the American Ambassador to Venezuela, listened to a series of jail-stories and then told one about a Venezuelan named Lopez, who was jailed because of his political activities. Lopez spent 11 years in jail. A visitor asked him how imprisonment was affecting him. "I can't move horizontally," said Lopez, pointing to the narrow, confining cell, "so I move vertically," he explained, in spiritual tones, pointing to the sky. "And since I can't go out to the world," he added, pointing to his books, "the world comes in to me."

Former Wives Work

Comes Another 'Cinderella Girl'

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., May 28.—Sam Goldwyn showed me a test of Constance Dowling, from the Group Theater. She's so good he's assigned her the romantic role opposite Dana Andrews in "Up in Arms." She's a lovely looking girl with plenty of fire. And for a girl of 21 she has had lots of experience. She danced at the Paradise night club in New York and ushered in the Belasco Theater, where Irwin Shaw saw her and gave her a bit in "Quiet City." She was with Burgess Meredith in "Liliom" and understudied Phyllis Brooks in "Panama Hattie." When told by Sam that she had the part she replied: "I'm not surprised. I've waited too long to be disappointed now" . . . Pola Negri lunched with Nils Asther today—first time they'd seen each other since 1928, when they played together in "Rachel." They're both on the comeback trail . . . Understand Veronica Lake got $1000 for that layout in a national magazine, which enraged her studio.

POLA NEGRI

Bubbles Schinazi's first novel, "Birthday," will be ready for fall reading . . . Three publishers want Tallulah Bankhead to do her life story. That should make spicy reading . . . Sam Wood is the dark horse in the race to buy Wendell Willkie's book, "One World." Haven't read it yet, but I'm told there isn't a picture in it . . . Ish Kabibble described Bunny Waters, who went with Kay Keyser's gang on a camp show, as "the bounty that started the mutiny" . . . The S. S. Billy Mitchell will be christened by Kay at Wilmington, Del., on June 1, and written on the side of the ship will be Kyser's theme song, "Thinking of You."

Mother Nature

While the international food conference is going on unabated at Hot Springs, the flood waters still rage in the Middle West. And by the time they're back to normal the planting season will be over, the top soil will have been washed down the river, and the expected crops will be only a dream in the farmer's mind. . . . When I wondered out loud in the column what had happened to little Charlotte Henry of "Alice in Wonderland," I didn't expect to hear that she's in San Diego, playing in a burlesque house under her own name. At least, she was two weeks ago. . . . When Mischa Auer's great Dane went commando on him and killed 25 of his chickens, he turned him right over to the Army. . . . Irving Berlin and Ellen left for New York. Irving returns next week to watch "This Is the Army" put together.

Surprise Bond Drive

Mrs. Frank Case and I dined at Bob Murphy's—looked over his new short snorter room. Col. Bradley, back from Guadalcanal, brought over a bill to be signed. Another gentleman, across the way, saw what was going on. He came with a bill and said, "If you can get the four people sitting at next table to sign this, I'll buy a $1000 war bond." So Deanna Durbin, Rita Hayworth, Orson Welles, and Joseph Cotten obliged. . . . Murphy's in addition to his cafe, feeds 10,500 defense workers daily. . . . Elevator man at the Guaranty building was to excited at having Nelson Rockefeller as a passenger that he shot all the regulars up to the eleventh floor. One passenger, not knowing who Rockefeller was, said, "What the matter? Anyone would think you were hauling up the President of the United States." No one laughed louder than Rockefeller.

Internal Wrangle Threatens to Blow Up The Price Battlers

Friends of tough, turbulent Leon Henderson say that when he came back from his Mexican vacation he went to the Russian restaurant Troika for an evening of entertainment and as he emerged bumped into a group of pals from his old Office of Price Administration.

Among them was Lou Maxon, the Detroit advertising magnate who has brought "new blood" into the OPA since Henderson's departure. Leon had never met Maxon, and as they were introduced he said:

"Gee, Lou, I'm glad to meet you. It took me a year and a half to become the country's greatest so-and-so. But you've done it in six weeks!"

The incident is symbolic of the rising tempers inside the office which faces the most difficult domestic job of the war—fixing prices and rationing everyday necessities. The fight has become so hot that nobody can predict exactly what will happen to the OPA. It will have to get tough and cut out its internal feuding, or it is finished.

Basic issue involved is whether prices should be increased to give the food processor, the food wholesaler and the retailer a better chance or whether prices should be held down to satisfy labor. Fundamentally the question is whether we will or will not have inflation; also whether prices can be kept down by the honor system, or must be enforced by police.

The Price Battlers

Here are the leaders in the civil war:

Lou Maxon, high-powered, likable Detroit advertising genius, imported by Prentiss Brown to tone down some of Henderson's toughness; looks like a minor league shortstop who has put on weight, with a rear view much like waddling Leon Henderson, but front view revealing no bay window.

Most people like Lou, especially those in the business world. They like his idea of throwing away the policeman's billy to enforce price ceilings, also his more liberal ideas on prices.

But among those who definitely do not like Maxon is the leader of the old Leon Henderson camp, J. Kenneth Galbraith, deputy administrator in charge of prices. Galbraith is so tall he appears to walk on stilts. Born at Iona Station, Ontario, Galbraith was educated at Cambridge, England, has the deliberate speech of an academician, the casual, tousled-hair manner of a precocious boy.

For the last four years, however, he has been an important economic adviser to the National Defense Council, then with the OPA. Behind his youthful casual exterior, Galbraith can be tough, and he has been plenty tough in fighting Maxon.

Chief higher-price advocate, goading Maxon from the rear, has been Charles H. Fleischer, of the A. & P. stores, who last week got fed up with the fight and resigned. He advocated a new system of "floating ceilings," permitting higher prices, arguing that the food industry was being squeezed between low price ceilings and the higher cost of food production.

Richard Gilbert, former Harvard economic instructor, now director of OPA's Defense Economics Section, and an archenemy of higher prices.

Russell Nixon, also of Harvard, now of the OPA Labor Advisory Committee. His committee put such pressure on Prentiss Brown against higher prices, argued that this would bring a chorus of wage demands from labor, that "floating ceilings" were killed.

Robert R. R. ("Triple R") Brooks, former economics instructor at Yale and Williams, now director of OPA's Labor Office and a devout disciple of low prices.

Byrnes, The Arbiter

This controversy over higher or lower prices rocks not only the Census Building, where OPA is housed, but also the East Wing of the White House where "Assistant President" Jimmy Byrnes has his headquarters. First the high-price boys, then the low-price boys, run to Byrnes, or to Ben Cohen, his unruffled aide, and castigate the opposition.

At times the slugging has hit below the belt, as when the high-price boys referred to Canadian-born Galbraith as a "naturalized citizen," or when the low-price boys said of Maxon (whose firm handles the Heinz pickle account), "He used to do 57 varieties of promotion, and this high-price stuff is the fifty-eighth.

Meanwhile, kindly OPA Boss Prentiss Brown, who would like to be friends with everybody and shrinks from Henderson's toughness, looks on with anguish, wishing he had never become Czar of Prices.

Meanwhile also, the American housewife, who is having her troubles trying to understand prices, can realize that OPA is having its price troubles, too.

No British Color Line

A British security officers (similar to our FBI) telephoned Mrs. Charles Dewey, wife of the Republican Congressman from Chicago, to ask if he could interview her regarding a maid who once worked for her.

"It's a Miss Pearl White," explained the British detective.

"I don't think a Pearl White ever worked for me," said Mrs. Dewey, "but I'll be glad to talk to you."

When the British security officer arrived, he explained that Miss White had applied for a position with one of the British offices in Washington and he wanted to investigate her character. He handed Mrs. Dewey a card on which was typewritten: "Pearl Palmer." And then in pencil was added, "white."

Mrs. Dewey explained that the girl's name was "Palmer" not "White." She has been wondering ever since how many people named "white" are in the files of British offices in Washington.

Duke Of Windsor

The Duke of Windsor hasn't lost his lure. When he came into the staid old State Department to see Secretary Hull the other day, the corridor was well populated with eager females.

One, wearing pink roses in her hair, peered over the bannister; another hopefully carried an autograph book in her hand. One of Sumner Welles' secretaries stood in the office doorway timidly, then gathered courage and joined others in the hall.

Hull's personal secretary, a grey-haired lady named Will Harris, who has seen the world's dignitaries for 25 years of Capital service, looked hopefully toward the door where the duke would emerge.

A colored messenger stood by the elevator, holding the duke's black derby, and a dozen newsmen waited, pencils poised.

Into this setting, the duke bowed out of Hull's office, spoke a few words to the press, dodged into the elevator. The ladies fluttered, sighed, went back to work.

Transit Net Dips Despite Peak Traffic

By S. Oliver Goodman

Despite the heaviest traffic in its history, Capital Transit Company yesterday reported that net income in April declined to $132,578. This was a dip of 3.4 per cent as compared with net of $137,302 in April, 1942.

The street cars and buses here carried 35,273,684 revenue passengers last month, a gain of 29.7 per cent over the 27,193,763 in the same 1942 month.

Operating revenues of $2,348,269 were 25 per cent heavier than in April, 1942, but this was offset by a 28 per cent increase in operating expenses, taxes and depreciation. Taxes showed the sharpest rise, advancing 45 per cent to $502,334.

For the four months ended April 30, Capital Transit's net income was $534,909 as compared with $454,741 last year or a gain of 19.6 per cent. Revenue passengers totaled 137,825,609 for the period, an increase of 19.6 per cent and a new all-time record for the first four months of any year.

Operating revenues of $2,335,233 were 36 per cent improved over the corresponding 1942 period, while operating expenses and taxes were 38.7 per cent heavier.

T. J. Norris to Attend Rutgers

Thomas J. Norris, assistant cashier and manager of the H Street branch of the Bank of Commerce and Savings, will return to Rutgers University at New Brunswick, N. J., on June 13, where he will resume studies at the graduate school of banking.

Pratt Helps on Bank Manual

Lester A. Pratt, Washington accountant, assisted in the preparation of a new bank manual entitled "How Directors Should Examine Their Bank." The booklet is being distributed by the New York State Bankers Association. Mr. Pratt, a local resident since 1918, is well known here for his special examinations for the office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Living Costs Up in April

The living costs of wage earners and low-salaried clerical workers in the United States rose one per cent in April, the National Industrial Conference board said yesterday.

Food prices increased 2.3 per cent from March, and the cost of fuel and light rose 1.4 per cent, the board said. Other components of living costs index remained unchanged.

The board, a private statistical organization, has revised its index to take account of changed purchasing habits resulting from rationing and war shortages, it was announced.

Floyd B. Odlum May Head R.-K.-O.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Financial circles heard today that Floyd B. Odlum, head of the huge Atlas Corporation investment firm, would enter the field of motion pictures next week as chairman of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation.

The meeting of the stockholders of R.-K.-O. is scheduled for next Wednesday at Dover, Del., and Wall Street understands that Odlum is expected to be named to the board of directors, and probably chairman of the board at a directors' meeting immediately afterward.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Selling which came from the Southwest, and apparently reflected a somewhat freer offering of fresh wheat, depressed bread cereal futures today. The market was a dull affair with most traders unwilling to make commitments in view of the approaching holiday on Monday.

Indians Whip Bosox, 5-2; Tie Nats for Lead

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

You'd have to say the American League pennant race is a beaut. Going into yesterday's games, the last-place team was only four games removed from the top. It's the kind of a race where a club with a four-game winning streak can shuttle from eighth place high into the first division.

POVICH

It's the kind of a race that permitted the Yankees to lose five in a row and eight out of nine, yet slip into a tie for fourth place only one game out of the lead. It's a throat-cutting race in which the eighth-place Red Sox slapped down the league-leading Indians twice in one day.

The Nats are doing all right. There's nothing absurd about the fact they actually took the lead. They've been getting the best pitching in the league ever since the season started, and the improvement in their infielding has been incredible. In fact, the Nats look like the closest thing to a hot club in the league at this time.

We'd say the Nats could give the other clubs quite a whirl of it. They're in a position where they ought to be able to take up the slack when, and if, their phenomenal pitching abates. Stan Spence, Mickey Vernon, Bob Johnson and George Case haven't been hitting as yet. There's every reason to expect that they will.

Spence is already giving signs of snapping out of his slump, and Johnson is meeting the ball better, but Vernon can't buy a hit. That is baffling to everybody, including himself. He's the fellow who hit .300 two years ago, and there's nothing the matter with his stroke. The Nats have every right to look for a terrific lift from Vernon, Johnson and Case.

The Nats are beginnning to look like a lucky club, too. That doesn't hurt. It was Lefty Gomez who quipped for posterity: "I'd rather be lucky than good." The Nats have been getting some breaks, as does every winning club. On the days when they haven't been hitting, their pitching has been wonderful and so well-timed.

The Washington Club is apparently lucky, too, to come up with a fellow like Alex Kampouris in a year when infielders are at a premium. They got Kampouris chiefly because Brooklyn had to cut down to the 25-player limit on May 15 and was in no position to haggle much over a purchase price.

Kampouris has been no ball of fire as yet, but it's obvious that he's a competent guy. He may not hit with Ellis Clary, but the Nats aren't going in for victories on a power basis this year. Kampouris is a smooth fielder and has brought some of the National League's class to the Nats. Kampouris achieves the easy way what Clary does in the rough-and-tumble manner.

Looking around, there would seem to be about three clubs to beat for the pennant—Cleveland, the Yankees and the Tigers. Like the Nats, the Tigers have been getting by on superb pitching, delivered chiefly by Paul Trout, Harold Newhouser, Hal White and Tommy Bridges, but the Detroit club doesn't have the batting potential of the Nats, nor is their infield in the same class. The Tigers' catching, moreover, is definitely weak.

Cleveland seems to be up there by every right. The Indians are doing all right in the pitchers league. Like every club they're suffering from a lack of punch, but they've got a swell infield, a great double play team in Keltner-Boudreau-Mack, and a couple of long distance hitters in Heath and Cullenbine. Otto Denning, the catcher turned first baseman, is getting by nicely. The Indians could be the toughest of the opposition.

The Yankees aren't aweing anybody any more. They've been deflated by those five straight defeats, and those lickings in nine games. Joe McCarthy now knows how it feels to operate with a club that doesn't win. McCarthy has been getting the pitching, but precious little else, and with no DiMaggio to grab up everything hit between left and right fields, no DiMaggio to give him that beautiful hit or throw, the Yanks are suffering.

But there's no disposition to count the Yanks out of it yet. This is a year when the Yankees could be far below Yankee standard and still do very well; even win the pennant. But this time, it won't come easy, to the Yankees or any other club, for that matter. No club is that good, and the winner will be the team that's best in what looks like a free-for-all.

Borowy Jinx Beats Tigers For Yanks

New Yorkers Take Over Third Place; Snap Losing Streak After Five Games

By the United Press

New York, May 28.—Hank Borowy's year-old jinx on the Detroit Tigers finally brought an end to the Yankees' five-game losing streak today.

The sophomore right-hander, who knocked off the Detroits four times last year and has never lost to them, gave his "whammy" its first 1943 test, and wound up with a 2-to-1 victory as he served up an eight-hitter. This broke a third-place American League deadlock between the Yanks and the Tigers, and left the New Yorkers in sole possession of the spot.

Dizzy Trout and Roy Henshaw combined to hold the Yanks to a mere half-dozen hits. However, one of them was Johnny Lindell's single with a runner on third that produced the Yanks' first marker in the fourth inning, and another was Charley Keller's one-base wallop with a mate on second in the fifth, which gave the New Yorkers their other tally.

Borowy, making his first pitching appearance since he worked one inning May 9, had a shutout until the ninth, when Ned Harris' single, Jimmy Bloodworth's double and an infield out gave the Tigers their lone run.

A's Win, 5-2, Over Chisox; Move Near Top

International News Service

Philadelphia, May 28. — The Athletics moved to within a game and a half of first place in the American League by defeating the Chicago hite Sox for the second successive time today, 5 to 2.

A three-run rally in the fifth broke a 1-1 tie and gave the Macks their victory. In this frame Russ Christopher and Elmo Valo singled, White sacrificed and Eddie Mayo walked, loading the bases. Bobby Estalella singled, scoring two runs and when Siebert flied to right Mayo scored.

Catcher Bob Swift of the A's was injured in the second inning when Don Kolloway ran into him on a successful double steal. Lee Ross started for the White Sox and Haynes finished the game. Ross was charged with the defeat.

Johnny Allen Fined and Suspended for This Outburst

Brooklyn teammates restrain Pitcher Johnny Allen as he charged Umpire George Barr in Thursday night's game between the Dodgers and the Pirates at Pittsburgh. After a brief tussle, Allen was separated from the umpire and the pitcher banished. Meanwhile, another squabble broke out, resulting in the chasing of Melton, Webber and Fitzsimmons of the Dodgers. Allen yesterday was suspended for 30 days and fined $200

Dodgers Coast To 6-2 Victory Over Pirates

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 8.—The Brooklyn Dodgers used both the sublime and the ridiculous methods to score four runs in the first inning today and coast to a 6-to-2 victory over the Pirates.

The "ridiculous" came first, when, after walking three men, Hank Gornicki cut loose with a wild pitch that let two runs score. Then, with one mate still aboard, Dixie Walker dumped his second homer of the year into the right-field stands. This was "sublime" to everyone but the Pirates, who sank into seventh place in the National League through the defeat.

Meantime, Ed Head hurled a six-hitter in chalking up his fourth win of the year against one defeat. Blanking the Bucs until the seventh, he stretched his string of scoreless innings to 26, but then a walk, a single and an error gave the Pirates their first run. Vince DiMaggio whacked his fourth four-bagger of the campaign in the bagger of the campaign in the ninth for the Bucs' only other tally.

Weatherman Acts Mean

Idle Nats Confident Of Holding Top Place

Ladies' Day Crowd of 8000 Turned Away; White Sox Here Today for Three Games

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Unaccustomed as they are to leading the league, the Nats are retaining a calm composure and viewing the situation as their idea of proper things in proper places.

In the dug-out yesterday after the scheduled game with the Browns was called off because of weather, Manager Ossie Bluege was registering no excitement.

"We should be leading the league," said Bluege. "We've been playing good ball. I haven't seen any club that deserves to be ahead of us so far. We aim to stay right up there. I'll be disappointed if we don't."

8000 Turned Away

A ladies day of crowd of 8000 was turned away from the park yesterday 45 minutes after game time when the weather refused to relent.

The Nats lost ground, however. Their idleness enabled the Cleveland Indians to move back into a tie for the league lead with a 5-2 victory over the Red Sox at Boston yesterday.

Today, the White Sox move into Griffith Stadium for a single game to be followed by a double-header on Sunday. It will be the first visit of the Chicago Club to Washington. The Sox are in sixth place, still in the thick of the eight-club pennant tangle.

For today's contest, Bluege will greet the White Sox with the league's leading pitcher, Senor Alex Carrasquel, who will be toting a four-game winning streak to the mound. Carrasquel hasn't been licked this season. His last outing was against Detroit in the West where he blew a 6-0 lead, but the Nats eventually won.

Bluege is not disturbing the lineup that beat the Browns two straight. He's leaving Alex Kampouris on third base despite the fact that Ellis Clary has rejoined the club.

"Kampouris looks all right to me," said Bluege. "Third base isn't his natural position. He ought to be playing second, but he's pretty smooth out there. And I like his hustle. I'm leaving him there until I need help."

Gomez to Hurl

Bluege revealed that Lefty Gomez will make his debut on the mound for the Nats in one of the games of tomorrow's double-header. . . . "I'm ready," quipped Gomez. "I hope I'm lucky too." . . . Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns had planned to experiment with Vernon Stephens in his outfield yesterday. . . . Stephens, one of the best shortstops in the league and its leading hitter to date, is ailing from a damaged knee that precludes his playing in the infield. . . . "but in the outfield he ought to go all right without those sudden starts and stops," said Sewell, "and besides, we need his hitting." . . . Sewell declares that the league's pitchers won't have such a weighty edge in the forthcoming weeks. . . . "They're far ahead of the hitters in conditioning, but pretty soon now only the good pitchers will win. . . . A lot of guys who aren't good pitchers have been winning because the hitters missed spring training in the South and didn't get enough workouts."

Triple in Tenth Gives Cards 2-1 Over Braves

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 28.—Lou Klein not only hit safely in his eighteenth consecutive game today but his tenth-inning triple drove Pitcher Max Lanier all the way from first with the winning run in the St. Louis Cardinals' 2-to-1 triumph over Boston.

The blow first was called a double, then later officially changed to a triple, as Klein sped on around after Max and touched third. Lanier had singled after one was out.

Only five hits were garnered by the Braves off the left-handed Lanier who marked up his second victory of the season. Three were by John McCarthy, also left-handed, whose sixth inning single drove in Tommy Holmes with the tying run. Stan Musial's second homer of the season in the first put the world champions into an early lead.

Red Barrett did a top-notch job of pitching for the Braves and between the first and the tenth allowed but two hits.

Allen Draws A Severe Fine And Suspension

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Johnny Allen, whose fiery temper has outlasted his fireball, today was given one of the stiffest penalties in National League history for attacking Umpire George Barr and precipitating a near riot in last night's game betwen the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pirates at Pittsburgh.

Although the fracas was broken up after Allen had grabbed Barr and shaken him hard enough to dislodge his cap, Ford Frick, National League president, suspended the vetern Dodger pitcher for 30 days and fined him $200. Pitchers Less Webber and Rube Melton, who joined in the altercation that arose when Barr called a balk against Allen, were fined $75 and $50, respectively. Fred Fitzsimmons, who also was banished from the game, received no further punishment.

National League statisticians could not find a comparable penalty since 1911, when Sherry Magee of the Phillies attacked an umpire and landed a left hook that laid open the arbiter's cheek. Magee also was fined $200 and suspended for the remainder of the season but was reinstated after little more than a month.

Allen's fine and suspension virtually duplicates that imposed by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis upon Frank Crosetti of the Yankees for pushing Umpire Bill Summers during the World Series last fall. Crosetti was suspended for the first month of the current season and fined $250.

Although Allen frequently has been in hot water since he broke into major league baseball with the New York Yankees in 1932, this is only the second big fine he has been called upon to pay. Oscar Vitt, then manager of the Cleveland Indians, fined him $250 in 1935 when he walked off the mound after Umpire Bill McGowan had ordered him to change a shirt with a tattered right sleeve that annoyed the Boston Red Sox batters. Allen turned the tables that time by selling the shirt to a Cleveland department store for the amount of the fine.

Ken Keltner Gives Spark To Victory

Slugger Returns To Line-up, Bangs Important Triple, Bats in Two Runs

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 28.—Ken Keltner recovered from his sinus attack to return to third base and spark the Cleveland Indians to a 5-2 verdict over the Boston Red Sox today and salvage one decision for his team in the three-game series.

The victory gave Cleveland a first-place tie with idle Washington.

Johnny Salveson, iron man last season with the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League, went the distance to give the Indians their first verdict over the last place Red Sox this season. He gave up 10 hits and kept them well scattered except in the eighth when the Sox put three together to score their pair of tallies.

Cleveland got off on the right foot in the opening inning when Russ Peters led off with a walk. After Manager Lou Boudreau went out, Keltner signalized his return to action by lacing a triple into deep right center to score Peters.

The Indians picked up singletons in the next three innings and added another in the sixth with Keltner getting credit for a second run-batted-in during the process.

Boston's runs came when Salveson weakened slightly in the eighth. Leon Culberson opened the frame by beating out a bunt. Pete Fox and Bobby Doerr singled to load the bases with none out. Tony Lupien's infield out accounted for the first tally and Jim Tabor drove in the second with a long fly to deep left center.

That was the extent of the Boston attack and both Manager Joe Cronin in the seventh and "Dee" Miles in the ninth failed in pinch-hitting roles.

Postponed High Games Now Set For Tuesday

The deciding games of the interhigh baseball series, postponed yesterday because of the weather, will be resumed Tuesday, Hardy L. Pearce, director of physical education in the public high schools, announced last night.

The games will bring together Wilson at Anacostia, and Tech at Eastern, and will clarify the standings to such extent that the final two out of three series between the No. 1 and No. 2 teams for the undisputed title will be started next Friday.

The situation now shows Tech and Eastern tied for the lead. The winner will automatically qualify for the championship play-off and the loser, finishing with a record of five wins and two losses, the same record as Wilson, should Wilson turn back Anacostia as it is favored to do.

The loser of the Tech-Eastern game will then meet Wilson, provided Wilson beats Anacostia, either Wednesday or Thursday for the right to meet the winner of the Tech-Eastern game for the two out of three games series for the championship.

10 Golf Clubs Schedule Memorial Day Events

Tourneys Willi Be Held for Benefit of Red Cross and Bond Sales Despite Gas Ban

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Ten golf clubs of Metropolitan Washington have scheduled tournaments for the many Memorial Day holiday weekend golfers who are bound and determined to travel by bus, streetcar or walk to their favorite country club or public links.

The Red Cross will benefit from events at Rock Creek, Kenwood, Woodmont and Indian Spring while Columbia Country Club has a war bond event carded with two war stamps the required entry fee and prizes to the low scorers in war bonds.

All of the events except the exhibition match at Rock Creek are intra-club affairs. Cliff Spencer, the two-time Maryland open champion, and Claude Rippy, Middle Atlantic Amateur champion, will continue their series of Red Cross benefit exhibitions but will split the team, Spencer pairing with pro Al Price against Rippy and George Voigt, one of the all-time amateur greats.

East Potomac will open today for the first time since the floods of last October, but the number of golfers who can stand the 1¼-mile walk from the nearest car stop at the Bureau of Engraving will decide whether or not the club will remain open through the pleasure-driving ban.

The clubs hardest hit by the gas ban—Manor C. C. at Norbeck, Md., and Prince Georges at Landover—will remain open. Manor is

HarmanNamed Grid Coach at Iowa Preflight

By the Associated Press

Iowa City, Iowa, May 28.—Appointment of Lieut. Comdr. Harvey J. Harman as athletic director and football coach at the Navy Preflight Training School here was announced today by Capt. David C. Hanrahan, school commanding officer.

Harman, whose appointment had been reported unofficially for several weeks, will succeed Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman, former University of Minnesota coach, who has been assigned to overseas duty.

Harman, one-time football star at Pittsburgh and later coach at several schools, including Pennsylvania and Rutgers, served the past year as athletic director at the Navy Preflight School at Chapel Hill, N. C. He will come here next week, shortly before Bierman departs, Captain Hanrahan said.

The Iowa City Cadets' football team has eight games booked for next fall, including four with Big Ten Conference teams, and one with Notre Dame. Two other games may be booked. Last year's eleven won seven and lost three.

Mae West to Wrestle Here

Mae West, an Oklahoma cowgirl, yesterday was booked to face Elvira Snodgrass, the former Tennessee Hillbilly now gone Hollywood, in the feature wrestling attraction on next Wednesday night's show at Turner's Arena.

Yank Batters No Longer Scare Other Teams as in Days of Murderers' Row

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—The difference between the current New York Yankees and the late-lamented Murderers' Row is apparent in many ways, but one of the Detroit Tiger rookies really hit the bull's-eye after watching them for the first time.

This was right after Thursday's game, during which Lefty Hal Newhouser fanned 14 of what still passes for the Bronx Bombers and generally made them look about as powerful as a collection of red hot bean-bag experts.

The rookie, trailing after the rest of the Detroits as they laughed their way into their dressing room, shook his head as if he just couldn't believe it.

"Hell," he muttered, just loud enough for a couple of bystanders to hear, "They don't scare you any more."

Chance Oak Second in Thrill Finish

Plain Bill in Opener And Attune in 2d Pay $88.40 in Daily Double; $41.80 Shot

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 28.—Jockey Carson Kirk, who has been riding in excellent form this year, put up a strong finish aboard E. A. Nicodemus' Mowmet to win the featured sixth race here today. Kirk drove the son of Mowlee and Metamore to the wire a neck in front of Harry J. Dipaula's Chance Oak at the end of a test of 120 feet more than six furlongs. Third money in the group of eight went to Mrs. H. C. Brimmer's Ginger Man. The winner was clocked in 1:17 2-5 over a dull oval and brought his backers a $9.40 mutuel. Meadow Star proved a sluggish favorite.

Chance Oak, from the No. 1 post position, went to the front at once and saved ground while setting the pace. Ginger Man, under green handling by Apprentice Ralph Kirk, was second with Mowmet third as the leaders went into the backstretch. Ginger Man, then dropped back and Mowmet and Chance Oak settled into a hard drive. In the closing stages the Mowlee gelding outgamed his rival.

$88.40 Daily Double

The program produced an $88.40 daily double. In the first race Plain Bill, owned by Taylor Leatherbury of Annapolis, Md., surprised the favorite players by defeating S. H. Rogers' Tumble Boy. Third money in this field of eight went to E. L. Poston's White Easter. Plain Bill paid $14.80 in his own right.

Mrs. J. M. Walsh's Attune, a full sister of the colt Art Brown and bred by John A. Manfusco of Washington, proved a galloping winner in the second event. The 3-year-old daughter of Anerold and True Blue led N. H. Tabler's Chat Hopkins and William F. Hitt's Triple Sun to the wire in the sprint of 4½ furlongs. The winner paid $7.60.

Long Shot Wins

Jockey Jack Mayer put up a strong ride to win with Mrs. N. E. Stanton's Star Strunk, a $41.80 shot, in the fifth race. Star Strung came between Bugler and Meadow Sun in the early stretch. Bugler came over on Star Strung, but Mayer refused to give ground and went on to drive the 3-year-old to the wire in front of the favorite.

STAR STRUNG was in first flight from start, came between horses when placed to drive and held on with good energy under strong handling. BUGLER, off alertly, was steadied while closest to MEADOW SUN's pace, was slightly bothered by winner and closed willingly. MEADOW SUN was rushed to take command early, was strongly handled and weakened. BUCKLE TIME raced evenly.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:35½. Winner, E. A. Nicodemus' br. g. Giants Defeat Cubs for Fifth Time, 3 to 1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 28.—Lou Novikoff finally got around to earning his salary with a couple of base hits today, but the New York Giants found their Chicago "cousins" hadn't changed a bit and came through with a 3-to-1 victory, after scoring twice in the first frame.

This gave the Giants a record of five straight without a loss over the Cubs this season. It also served to sink Jimmy Wilson's woeful warriors deeper into the National League cellar and moved the Giants up a notch to sixth.

Harry Feldman, turning in his first victory of the year, gave up nine hits, but blanked the Cubs until the seventh. Novikoff chipped in with a brace of singles.

Meantime, Hi Bithorn gave up only five hits altogether, but two of them, together with a pair of walks and an outfield fly, produced the two first-inning tallies and two others—by Mel Ott and Sid Gordon — netted the other Giant marker in the ninth. Gordon drove in a pair of runs.

Poll in Senate Favors Trade Act Unchanged

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

A Senate majority poll last night indicated victory by a narrow margin in the Administration's fight to extend the reciprocal trade law without "emasculating" amendments as a postwar keystone world trade relation.

After a full day's debate without reaching a vote, the Senate unanimously agreed to act Tuesday on the Danaher committee amendment making trade agreements subject to termination by joint congressional resolution six months after the war.

Against this amendment the Administration had directed its chief opposition, contending it would serve notice on United Nations Allies that Congress could not be relied on in economic world reconstruction following the war.

Party polls last night pointed to defeat of the amendment by more than five votes, after Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, switched his position to oppose the change. Ball, principal sponsor of a resolution to commit the Senate in advance to cooperation in postwar planning, said a careful study had convinced him the amendment would tie the hands of the Executive.

Tight Rein Sought

Unexpected strength meanwhile developed for two more far-reaching changes imposing a tight congressional rein on the trade program. One of these, by Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut would treat trade agreements as treaties, and require Senate ratification. The other, by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming would require majority approval of trade agreements by both houses of Congress. Republicans, now almost solidly supporting the milder Danaher amendment, were expected to swing in a body to the more drastic changes should their "compromise" effort fail.

Should any of the limiting amendments succeed. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat) of Missouri said he would join a number of Democrats in voting against any extension of the act. Amendment, Clark said, would be equivalent to suspension of the law "and Republicans would have to take the responsibility."

Three Democrats, Senators Byrd of Virginia, Thomas of Utah and Eastland of Mississippi, yesterday took the floor for unamended extension. Three Republicans, Senators Capper of Kansas, Langer of North Dakota and Bushfield of South Dakota, attacked the program.

Byrd's Warning

Byrd told the Senate the reciprocal trade program "by its very nature is a program of private enterprise" giving "our private producers and traders an opportunity to deal with other producers and traders on terms to be determined by the private parties in their own self-interest."

"Once these agreements begin to fall, whether on our own initiative or on the initiative of the other parties, the whole cooperative structure would collapse like a house of cards," said the Virginian.

Langer spoke for Congressional approval of all trade pacts "to keep faith with the American farmer and labor." Argument that the program is needed to develop unity among United Nations Allies, Langer charged, is a "falsehood" invented by "academic bureaucrats who label themselves as experts."

Senate Curbs Roosevelt's Use Of Controversial Agency Funds

Another Appropriations Committee rider blocked a House attempt to cut three Federal officials from the Government payroll.

Restrictions on White House use of the emergency fund forbade the President's transfer of money to any agency for which Congress already has appropriated, or to any budgeted functions from which Congress has withheld appropriations. The War and Navy Departments were specifically exempted.

Senate action stiffened a Republican-sponsored House amendment forbidding transfers from the fund to two agencies under congressional fire—the Farm Security Administration and the National Resources Planning Board. The Senate change imposed an even more rigid straight-jacket, leading two Administration Senators to warn House and Senate conferees to review the language carefully. Senators Lucas of Illinois and Hayden of Arizona (Democrats), said they feared the amendment went too far.

The three Government employes returned to Federal payrolls were William E. Dodd, jr., and Goodwin B. Watson, Federal Communications Commission analysts, and Dr. Robert Morse Lovett, Government secretary to the Virgin Islands.

The House had denied funds for their pay on recommendations of the Kerr Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, which investigated a list of 38 names of Federal employes accused by the Dies Committee of affiliation with alleged "subversive" organizations.

4 Artists Arrive 'Down Under' To Paint a Record of War

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters In Australia, May 28.—Four widely known artists have arrived in Australia to make paintings and sketches for a permanent historical record of this war.

The illustrator and portrait painter, McClelland Barclay, a naval lieutenant commander, is doing a series of Navy studies here and in New Guinea. He already has made portraits of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Vice Admiral Arthur Carpenter and a number of officers and enlisted men among the Navy, Army and Marine heroes of recent engagements.

Also recently arrived is the first unit of a brand-new "War Art Corps," which the War Department Art Advisory Committee headed by George Biddle of Philadelphia, organized in Washington.

The unit here is the first to go into operation, but others are planned for the South Pacific, Alaska and other theaters of war.

Heading the Southwest Pacific unit is Capt. Barse Miller of La Canada, Calif., one of America's best known artists. First Lieut. Frede Vidar of Montclair, N. J., and Second Lieut. Sidney Simon of Pittsburgh, are working with him.

Barclay, 52, has been in the Navy since 1940 when he volunteered to help in the personnel procurement programa.

He has qualified as a diver, descending 90 feet below the surface, dived in a submarine and dive-bombed in a plane from 30,000 feet. He also developed a reversible, camouflaged coverall used in jungle warfare, and suggested the attachment of a small whistle to life jackets—an idea since adopted by the Navy.

"I have been called a pretty girl artist," Barclay told interviewers. "But I am going to get in all of the front-line action I can. I want to bring out the idea that wars are fought by men, and not just by their tools."

Upsetting Wreck

New York—A freight car rounding a siding here jumped the tracks, banged into two other box cars which smashed into a watchman's shanty.

A wrecking crew was summoned and extricated two men. Said one of the men to the other:

Name It and . . .

We will have tutti-frutti, thank you.

The National Geographic Society disclosed yesterday that, what with the war halting foreign exports, manufacturers of flavoring extracts have worked like mad and produced artificial cinnamon, nutmeg, anise, caraway and chocolate flavors that will do most any day for the real thing.

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Federal workers again take over this column to express their views. Letters, subject to condensation, must be sent to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

SENSIBLE MEN, ARISE!

The revolution can begin June 30, 1943.

You have another month to sweat and think about this problem of hot clothes for men in hot Washington.

How many men in Washington have talked over the matter of men's hot-weather clothing, agreed without exception that something can and should be done about it, and then, like timid, wild little animals, shrunk back into their buttoned vests and done nothing? How many of these thousands might respond gladly if a mass meeting for cooler styles could be got under way?

Let us find out how many.

Beginning now, let us start the organization of the B. S. M., the Brotherhood of Sensible Men, organized to revolt en masse June 30, and throw off the shackles of collar, and tie and coats. Let us plant the idea in high places and in low places, so that we will not awaken June 30 and see only a few brazen and audacious men daring ridicule and censure in another abortive attempt to liberate the male from the starched hangman's noose and the claustrophobic, smothering coat. Let us start with Cabinet members and get them on the dotted line in a promise to wear sport shirts—collarless and tieless—and slacks, to the office, beginnnig June 30, 1943.

That would make it easier to win, of course, if some of the Cabinet members joined up.

Adoption of slacks and sports shirts with no coats for all men workers in Washington should be the simplest sales job in history if we begin now. In the first place, the name of the organization will help. It is a brotherhood, and the Lord knows—as does the Weather Bureau—that we are already baked into an amorphous and homogenous mass by Washington's summer weather. We are brothers under the baked skin. We are all in the same boat.

Next, we are sensible—or we can be. Who would agree that we have any sense at all if we continue to wear tight collars when freedom is in sight? And who would refuse to join a sensible organization? Not even a Cabinet member, no not even a politician—not even an office politician—could stand up and refuse to join a sensible organization.

Thirdly, we are men. Or are we? Are we mice or men? This is really the crux of the matter. We've been mice for so long.

Now about this Cabinet member assistance. There's Ickes. He will join. Find some opposition to it, and he would even lead the way. And Morgenthau? Possibly. Hull? Well, there's protocol to consider, diplomacy, formality . . . we'd better not count on him. He couldn't even wear slacks by proxy, and assign the job to Welles or Acheson or others of his career men. Better count the State Department out. Biddle is a good bet. So is Wickard. Madame Perkins is already emancipated sartorially. Jesse Jones is a big, hearty Texan. Say for instance, he didn't want to join, felt a little hesitance about becoming a Sensible Brother. What eect would that have in Texas? They're even considering a law abolishing the coat in Texas. Jones will undoubtedly come through.

Well, it would seem the Brotherhood of Sensible Men can count on considerable support and membership from men in high places. Whence can come our main strength?

Disregarding sissies among the underlings in Government offices, and the stuffed shirts who think they have to dress to maintain their fancied position or superiority in their offices, there should be at least 100,000 suffering males who would gladly start being sensible simultaneously. That many Adams Apples on public view on a given morning would put into active operation the old law of "nothing succeeds like success" and the B. S. M. would be in. Laggards would then have to join up.

UTILIZE 4-F's.

(The armed forces are clamoring for WAACS and WAVES to replace men for fighting. There are lots of men in 4-F who can't get into the service. Why not put them in uniform, a home-front army, and assign them to the work of WAVES and WAACS. Office work can't hurt a 4-F.)

THE A. G. O.

I know a place where bedlam reigns,
Where indecisions grow.
For three long years I've labored in
The good old A. G. O.

Each day strange memos circulate
For workers to digest.
I never read them, but am glad
To sign them, like the rest.

There really isn't need, I claim,
To scan these notes each day,
Because a countermand, you see,
Right soon will come our way.

Whenever someone's section moves
And stays put for a day,
An order quickly comes around
"You're moving back a bay."

About the time you've memorized
Some numbers on the phone,
You dial, find the number changed,
And in disgust, you groan.

And if, perchance, you lose your desk,
It doesn't mean a thing.
The chances are your branch has moved
Into another wing.

And when you've really learned the work
And know it thoroughly,
They'll give you something else to do
Right quick, just wait and see.

But when you seek a pay increase
For progress you have made,
They'll promise quick promotion, but
You never get the grade.

Churchmen Back Laws On Disease

Federation Body Indorses Move To Curb Venereal Ills in District

Support of proposed legislation designed to curb venereal disease in the District came yesterday from the board of directors of the Washington Federation of Churches.

The legislation was proposed by Wilbur La Roe, chairman of the group's civic affairs committee. It was first presented at a closed meeting of city officials in the Statler Hotel May 24.

According to the report of the meeting carried in The Washington Post, the proposals are substantially as follows:

1. A bill empowering the public health officer and his staff to arrest and examine persons suspected of having venereal disease.

2. A bill outlawing "soliciting" by prostitutes not only on the streets but in all other places.

3. A law applying to so-called "call houses," which supply girls upon telephone request.

Meanwhile, the Federation, of which Dr. Frederick E. Reissig is executive secretary, and Dr. John W. Rustin, president, also adopted a resolution approving House bill 2620, providing for a delegate from the District of Columbia in the House of Representatives.

Earlier in the day Carmen Beach, 29, pleaded not guilty in District Court to an indictment charging violations of the White Slave Act in the operation of a swanky house of prostitution in the 1300 block of Fifteenth Street Northwest.

Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius said that the majority of the girls were of latin extraction as were most of the patrons.

Zoo Gets 30 New 'Good-Neighbors' From Mexico Including 'Yoo Hoo' Troupial Sans Gen. Lear

Thirty good neighbors came to Washington yesterday to occupy cages at the Zoo. They are jungle birds—tanagers, finches, honey creepers, troupials, cardinals, grosbeaks, hummingbirds, jays, from Mexico.

Displaying most of the bright and iridescent colors of birddom, they sing, too. Especially the troupials, sometimes known as bugle birds because they sound like one, sometimes as giant orioles because they look like one. They also might be called General Lears without desecration, since their well modulated call is, "Yoo hoo-hooooooo," more than anything else.

Although two slate blue crested jays are interned by themselves lest they deplete the display by practising their unpleasant habit of killing small birds, most of the aggregation is enjoying a superjungle on which an Equatorial sun from a fancy lamp shines four hours daily.

Built on 10 inches of earth and boasting a waterfall and drain, Dr. Mann expects it to be self-cleaning. The jungle vegetation is transplanted from a nursery back of the reptile house as well as "cadged" from other sources, Dr. Mann said yesterday. Anyone's left over Christmas poinsettias are welcome for such purposes, he added.

Dr. Mann especially hopes to keep the three varieties of humming birds—hummingbirds don't thrive well in captivity. Assistant Keeper Malcolm Davis is coaxing them to eat melon food with honey, a dash of protein and sugar water—sugar rationing notwithstanding. Some have been isolated, but most are in the large aviary. Spectators looking there, however, will find they are not the smallest birds. A finch holds that distinction.

A Texas dealer brought the birds to Washington and was given one of the herd of too-prolific red deer owned by the zoo. From their artificial iceberg across the room, the zoo's correct young penguins yesterday looked tacit approval of the exchange with grudging stares of admiration at their flamboyantly feathered new neighbors.

Lieut. Sidney Buck Of Kensington, Md., Wounded in Africa

First Lieut. Sidney Buck, pilot of a Flying Fortress, was wounded in action in North Africa on May 3, according to word reaching his mother, Mrs. Philip E. Buck of 109 West Saul Road, Kensington, Md., yesterday.

Lieutenant Buck, 22, attended Maryland University for three years before enlisting in the Air Corps. He received his wings at Craig Field, Ala., in April last year. He received further training at MacDill Field, Fla., and Boise, Idaho. His father is associated with the Public Roads Administration.

Federal Worker Invests 22 Per Cent Of Salary in Bonds

MRS. SUYDAM

Mrs. Rosemary Suydam, a clerk-stenographer in the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations of the Department of Agriculture, backs up her statement of "I want to do everything I can in every way possible to bring about the safe and victorious return of all our men in the military service" by investing 22 per cent of her salary in War Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

Mrs. Suydam, who lives at 1673 W Street Southeast, has a husband and a brother serving with the armed forces. Charles Suydam, her husband, is a master sergeant in the Army Air Forces in North Africa and her brother is with the United States Navy in Alaska.

Her interest in aiding the war effort is a personal one and she feels that next to actually fighting at the front, buying War Bonds is the most important thing she can do.

Budapest Quartet Performs With Persuasive Eloquence

By Ray C. B. Brown

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Budapest String Quartet on Friday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in A minor, Op. 29 (Schubert), Quartet in B minor, Op. 11 (Barber), Quartet in A minor, Op. 132 (Beethoven).

Making their last appearance of the season last evening in Coolidge Auditorium, Josef Roismann and his colleagues of the Budapest String Quartet played with such persuasive eloquence as to leave with their auditors the pleasantest of memories which must last until they return next autumn for another sojourn. Whether by coincidence or by choice, their leave-taking program had a vein of sadness, for the three works performed were all in minor keys. But none of these compositions was tinged with pessimism or darkened by despair; on the contrary, they were animated by confidence and courage.

BROWN

The concert began with Schubert's A minor quartet which has happily escaped being nicknamed the "Rosamunde" because of the themes in the andante movement. This familiar and lyrically lovely work was followed by Samuel Barber's B minor quartet which contains one memorable section—the adagio that was later scored for orchestra. These pages have a moving quality and a spiritual sincerity disclosing the composer's genuine inspiration. If the rest of the work were as potently written, it would be a little masterpiece of poesy.

A great masterpiece, Beethoven's A minor quartet, was the concluding work that sent one away thoughtfully into the night. While listening to it, one realized that fulfillment of Prince Galatzin's prophecy, made in 1824; "Your genius is centuries in advance, and at the present time there is scarcely one hearer who would be sufficiently enlightened to enjoy the full beauty of this music; but posterity will pay homage to you and bless your memory more than your contemporaries are able to do."

This quartet, wonderful as it is by itself, should seldom be separated from the other two members of the triptych—the B flat major and the C sharp minor quartets. They are linked by a single fugal subject, the theme announced by the violoncello, which recurs in divers metamorphoses throughout the works. While writing the A minor quartet, Beethoven was already engaged upon the B flat major, which was finished a month later, and he started to compose the C sharp minor while in the midst of its predecessor. They are all embued with the same metaphysical thought, and their inter-relation is so close that they are musically of the same blood.

Harry M. Harvell, 44, Negro, 815 Fourth Street Southwest, was fatally injured when struck by an automobile yesterday at Twentieth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. He died last night at Casualty Hospital, making the District's thirty-third victim.

According to police, Harvell was standing near a parking lot when struck by an automobile driven by Logan W. Gould, 57, of 3025 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast. Police said the car leaped a curb, knocked down a fire-alarm box and pinned Harvell against a tree.

$888,331.70 Is Appropriated As Part of D. C. Deficiency Bill

As part of the $143,600,000 urgent deficiency bill, the Senate yesterday passed appropriations totaling $888,331.70 for the District.

Because of amendments, including the District appropriation amendments, the bill, which had already passed the House, will go to conference but no opposition is expected on the local items.

Chief item is the sum of $589,093 to meet salary increased provided under recent legislation for District school teachers, policemen and firemen.

For the operation of the Washington Aqueduct, the Senate appropriated $174,763. Additional appropriations were $28,500 for increased tuberculosis care, $4500 for deportation of nonresident insane, $5464 for increased Municipal Court salaries, including pay of retired judges.

Gas Subsidy Held Cause Of Shortage

AAA Charges Trucks Which Could Bring Supply From Virginia Are Now Kept Idle

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Quibbling over Government subsidies to gasoline companies to cover transportation costs by tank truck has prevented employment of a large number of idle trucks to haul fuel from Virginia into Washington and relieve the present shortage, the American Automobile Association declared yesterday in a telegram to James F. Byrnes, newly appointed Director of Mobilization.

The message was sent to Byrnes by Thomas P. Henry, national president of the A. A. A.

The Federal Government now pays a subsidy to oil companies to defray the costs of transporting gasoline by either water or rail. This subsidy is not paid if the fuel is moved by tank trucks along the highway, the A. A. A. said.

Could Relieve Shortage

The A. A. A. asserted there are now sufficient idle highway tank trucks to move enough gasoline from the pipeline terminus in Richmond to Washington to relieve the acute shortage here within a few days, instead of waiting to move it by barge, which takes a week.

The organization president also said that the use of the tank trucks would result in breaking the near-famine condition all over the shortage area in the East.

The telegram also urged the re-establishment of the committee headed by Bernard Baruch to study the entire gasoline situation.

Still Much Driving

Meanwhile, the majority of Washington motorists are driving on "borrowed" gasoline, William A. Van Duzer, chief of the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic, revealed yesterday when he said their traffic counts showed reductions in motor traffic of only 20.3 per cent since the current gasoline famine began.

Van Duzer, Robert K. Thompson, local OPA director, and a representative of a large oil company all agreed that Mr. and Mrs. Washington were simply using the reserve gasoline they had stored in their tanks from last week.

At the same time Van Duzer said traffic now was 50 per cent less than it was a year ago.

Supply Anxiously Guarded

Anxiously guarding the thin trickle of gasoline coming into the city, dealers gloomily asserted again they saw no relief until next week. And even then they do not expect but half of their needs. The over-all picture, they said, is dark.

Standard Oil Co. officials said they did not expect to receive any more barges until next week, having received their last one on Tuesday.

Prosecuting their campaign against pleasure driving the local OPA yesterday reported having recorded license numbers of 89 cars suspected of having been used in pleasure driving. This brings the total of alleged pleasure drivers facing action to 544.

Dealers Ask Gas Study by Congress

Uniform limitation of gasoline for dealers, based on previous sales records, and a congressional investigation to determine the feasibility of placing all gasoline administration under a single agency were alleviative measures recommended yesterday by representatives of the Eastern States Gasoline Dealers.

The representatives maintained that the entire Nation should be rationed on an equitable basis with the Eastern States and said 15 per cent of the stations had been forced to close by March and estimated that the figures had probably reached 25 per cent by the present time.

14 Juveniles Make Escape At D. C. Home

While an attendant's attention "was distracted by something else," 14 boys, suspects in various criminal offenses, escaped the District Receiving Home yesterday at 3:35 p. m. by way of a fire escape.

Within an hour, Anthony Caffrey, superintendent of the home, and Ninth precinct policemen had rounded up half of the fugitives. The other seven were still at liberty last night.

The boys were awaiting Juvenile Court action. It was said they were being held on charges of auto theft, burglary and some minor offenses.

Gardener Faces Charge

Charged with cruelty to animals after a German shepherd dog became snared in a baited steel trap, Thomas Ross, 49-year-old butcher, will be arraigned at Municipal Court this morning.

A warrant, sworn to by Policemen T. E. Howie and J. B. Southard, Ninth Precinct, who discovered the dog's plight, Thursday, was served on Rose at his home, 212 Fifth Street Northeast, yesterday. He posted $100 collateral to insure his appearance at court.

The trap baited with bones from a beef rib roast, was apparently set to prevent stray dogs from destroying a victory garden.

Death Held Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday in the death of Thomas E. Henson, Negro, 31, 1128 K Street Southeast, who jumped from the Highway Bridge, Thursday night. Police learned the man recently had been released from St. Elizabeths Hospital. He leaves a wife and four children.

Awarded Degree

Dr. Ruth A. Parmelee, missionary physician under American Board of Foreign Missions, and sister of J. H. Parmelee, director of Railway Economics here, yesterday received from the Harvard School of Public Health the degree of master of public health. Dr. Parmelee worked for four months in Greece aiding refugees.

Honor Guard Of U. S. Girls To Be at Rites

Thirty-one guards of honor—Government girls who participated in the recent campaign conducted by The Washington Post and the Council of Personnel Administration to purchase two warplanes for the Army and Navy—again will become active, it was announced yesterday.

They will act as ushers during the Federal employes memorial service, honoring the war dead among Government workers.

The program will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday in the Sylvan Theater near the Washington Monument, according to Eleanore Leech, secretary of the Honor Guard permanent organization.

Those who will aid during the services are: Frankie Edwards, Helen Halota, Helen Cline, Eloise Shipp, Lulu Tinker, Edna Mindheim, Margaret Hould, Marjorie Roure, Rita Weithas, Mary Frances Gardner, Edith Disney, Betty Moore, Ruby Brownson, Celia Wicks, Irene Harris, Mardelle Rogers, Louise Rummage, Dorothy E. Grimm, Myrtle Jane Jackson, Marjorie Richter, Betty Wiley, Mary E. King, Rose Cocaro, Hazel McCreary, Elizabeth Schneider, Eta Russman, Dominta Calacchico, Louise Stull, Maxine Cunningham, Dorothy Page and Anne Gillette.

22% of New Ration Applicants In D. C. File Incorrect Forms

Twenty-two per cent of the 33,039 persons who have mailed their applications for War Ration Book No. 3 to local boards have made them out incorrectly, the District Office of Price Administration reported yesterday. They will have to be returned to the applicants.

The most frequent error was failure to sign—3738 neglected that important item. Another 1197 omitted date of birth and 438 left out both signature and date. Sixty-four wrote so illegibly that OPA couldn't read the information and 95 forgot to detach their stubs. Seventeen members of the armed forces, ineligible to apply, did so nevertheless.

OPA advised that applicants be careful to print all names clearly, answer all questions correctly, sign, affix a stamp, drop in a mail-box, not to fold, not to put in an envelope, and by all means to mail at once. Deadline is June 10.

Housekeeper Appeal

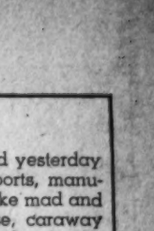
A committee of 30 women appealed yesterday to the District Commissioners to reconsider the decision to drop the housekeepers' aid program from the District budget.

The Commissioners told these representatives of various local welfare and charitable organizations that they would take under consideration the request that $35,000 be allotted during the coming year for this former WPA project. The housekeepers aid program provided housekeepers for homes where there were invalids or children who had to be looked after because nurses could not be afforded or because the parents had to be away all day.

Capt. Barrett Made Chief Of Detectives

Replaces Mansfield; Lieut. Clyde Strange Is Appointed As Assistant

Capt. Robert J. Barrett was designated an acting inspector and chief of Washington detectives late yesterday by the District Commissioners when they ordered the retirement of Inspector Richard H. Mansfield.



BARRETT

Simultaneously, Lieut. Clyde N. Strange, 47, chief of the Robbery Squad, was named an acting captain to fill Barrett's vacancy as assistant chief of detectives.

At the same time, it was learned, Barrett, who has been filling Mansfield's place since the latter was stricken with a heart attack in March, is planning to place Lieut. Herbert Wanamaker in Strange's post.

Wanamaker is now a desk lieutenant at the Detective Bureau. His position is expected to be filled by one of two lieutenants due to be promoted in the near future.

Take Charge Today

Barrett and Strange will assume complete command of the Detective Bureau, one of the hottest law enforcement spots in the Nation today, next Tuesday. The Commissioners announced the two will remain in an acting capacity until September 1.

The retirement of Mansfield was recommended to the Commissioners by a Police Retiring Board last week. The board's decision was based on testimony of physicians that the inspector's condition made him "unfit for further duty."

STRANGE

He, however, will not actually retire until September 1, the date on which his accumulated leave is exhausted.

Barrett will become the youngest chief of detectives, both in age and in service, in the history of the Police Department. He is 40 and lacks a month of having 18 years' experience.

Assistant Is Veteran

His new assistant is a veteran of 22 years' service and a former detective sergeant on the homicide squad.

Both men won their rank through long hours of work on criminal cases. Barrett's record is outstanding. He has solved such crimes as the Garden T. Shoppe slaying of Mrs. Elizabeth Jaynes, the $100,000 Hyattsville Bank robbery, the Eklund sniper killings and he directed investigation which led to the execution of Jarvis Catoe.

Strange, too, has an enviable record. He has won more than 20 commendations for meritorious service and in the past two months he has personally been commended by Police Chief Edward J. Kelly for the capture of a gang of hold-up men and safecrackers.

Inspector Mansfield has been on sick leave since March. He held the position as chief of detectives for two years following a congressional investigation of police.

Under his direction the Detective Bureau, described to Congress as "the weakest link in the Police Department," was rejuvenated. Today it is considered one of the most efficient in the country.

Howard R.O.T.C. Men Presented Awards at Drill

The annual military day of the R. O. T. C. of Howard University furnished a series of events yesterday beginning with regimental review in honor of the university president, Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson. Individual, squad, platoon and company competitions were completed before a downpour interrupted the special exercises.

Individual competition, participated in by a first basic student from each of three companies, was won by Pvt. Carroll T. Robinson, Company C. The second basic student winner was Coleman Tucson, Company A, while the first advanced student award went to Sergt. Jason Grant, Company A.

Squad competition was won by a Company B unit, commanded by Sergt. William Hyde. Platoon competition was won by Company A, Lieut. Warren Brooks commanding. Winner of the company competition also was Company A, commanded by Capt. James Bowman.

Students receiving special certificates of award for efficiency were O'Neal Koger and George Jones, who will report to Fort Benning, Ga., two weeks after graduation, and Elmwood Odom, Wilbur Jackson and James Bowman, who will be deferred for study of medicine.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

If you are working hard under terrific strain, you will appreciate how much feeling can be put into this one-word recommendation for fitness: REST.

That's what Ilona Massey, beautiful blonde musical comedy star, would rather have right now than diamonds. Since the "Ziegfeld Follies" opened in New York she has been so busy rushing around to appointments and rehearsals and all the fuss and fun connected with Broadway that she has scarcely had time to catch her breath.

Does she like the excitement? Of course, she does! "But when the show closes," she told me, anent the subject of standing up to strain, "I am going away to a quiet sanatorium for three weeks and do nothing but rest and eat and eat and rest."

Miss Massey is not the one to go in for half measures. You may recall that when she first went to Hollywood she had a bit of slimming to do. She went on a strict diet of cottage cheese, skim milk, lots of green salads with no dressing, and steamed liver. She would diet strenuously for a week, during which time she did mild exercise—usually walking. Then she would go back to her usual menus, which would rate an A from any nutritionist, and exercise like fury. When she was eating like any other human being she went in for what you might call violent exercise. Her favorite trick was scrubbing the garage floor. A few days of that and she would return to her diet and mild exercise program. She did a beautiful job of slimming off about 20 pounds.

But to get back to New York. She says she doesn't get any exercise—but a member of the cast insists "she walks her head off." Checking up, I found she averages 3 to 4 miles a day.

She has massage two or three times a week and thinks it is the thing for anyone who is highly strung or who is working extra hard—and so do I, for anyone who has the cash. Whether it's the walking or the massage or the combination, I wouldn't know, but her figure is really lovely. She is large-boned and slim at 127 to 130 pounds for her height of 5 feet 7. She wears a size 16 through the shoulders and a 14 through the hips—the reverse of most figures! Her measurements are approximately: Bust 36 inches, waist 26 inches, hips 34 inches.

Her family are still living in Budapest, the city where she was brought up, so her mind is on the war much of the time. But she tries not to worry "because they are farming people and, at least, I tell myself, they will have enough to eat."

Summer Night's Dream

By Jeanne Contini

A light sleeping garment is the formula for deep summer slumber. This is particularly essential here in Washington, where from the temperature one would be led to suspect that the sun shone bright in the middle of the night. The value of sweet, untossed repose in terms of the lift it gives your face, spirits, and efficiency, is incalculable. Most of us have neither the time nor the control to relax in fits and starts borrowed from the working day. We must make the most of the sacred eight hours.

To that end we present a gown made of slithery soft rayon jersey. The fabric is white, printed with small pink rosebuds and looks as freshly inviting as scented, clean white sheets. The lines are simple and classic in the most flattering sense of the word. Several degrees cooler than silk and without cotton's propensity to crumple, this gown should help you have a full night's rest. Sizes go from 34 to 40 . . . about $3.00.

The matching robe is about $4.00.

Together they make a perfect ensemble for traveling; they fold into a few cubic inches of space and come out completely uncrushed. Besides, you never know what you're facing in the way of laundry facilities and this attractive pair goes happily into a basin, emerges clean, hangs dry over a towel rack, and never needs the ministrations of an iron.

The Gentler Sex

We'll Miss This War

I

Of course we're praying that this terrible war
Will be over as soon as possible,
And all the boys home again;
But just the same there often comes the darkening thought,
Of all the things we'll miss when life goes back—or on
To peaceful course,
And everyone is dutifully and determinedly

II

Sitting in the back yard, reasonably sure
That no surprise parties
Of motorists will descend on us for food and drink and even lodging;
And when we're creeping in the long hot motor cavalcade,
Around Hains Point,
Just to have something to do, we'll wonder why
We didn't know a good thing when we had it.

III

We'll often think of these rushed, though simple moments,
When we go back to having the club's big annual banquet,
The chrysanthemum tea, the Maypole dance, the president's large reception,
And when once again we get involved in paying back
And find ourselves competing in our "crowds" to serve
Hors d'oeuvres more conversational.

IV

Not minding the appraising look of recognition
In our friends' eyes;
We'll miss not having to apologize for our old model car,
Radio, refrigerator, bath fixtures, egg beater,
We'll miss not having
To join things, go places, be nice to people; most of all we'll miss
That knowing self a little better.

V

When we are back at bridge teas after airplane spotting,
Working in hospitals, canteens, sewing rooms,
We'll miss a lot of things;
But most of all the comforting earthy weariness
That comes from a day's work well done,
Also the deep and soothing feeling
That we are a part of the current of life, not mere ripples

VI

Yes, we'll miss this war—or will we?
Perhaps we won't . . . perhaps life's pattern will still be one
Of hard reality;
Or perhaps we shall have learned our tragic lesson
Too well to seek escape again in trivia,
Too well to waste ourselves
Once more in surface frothings, perhaps . . . perhaps . . . we shall be wise enough . . .
Strong enough to remember.

"Oh, Jimmy, are you eating? Now don't you go and spoil the very first dinner I'm cooking for you!"

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

A beefsteak and kidney pie, as pictured here, may be the answer to your main dish need now that red coupons are at low ebb. Arrange the pastry crust as shown above and you will have all eyes turned to the piece de resistance

If your supply of red coupons has dwindled, you will want to find a meat dish that will require few points. Don't let the end of the month end with inadequate nutrition. Use the combination trick — beefsteak and kidneys.

Martha Ellyn

A beefsteak and kidney pie when given the proper touch can be as pretty as strawberry shortcake and equally as appealing in flavor. This dish is a meal in one. Cook a fresh vegetable or toss a vegetable salad and you practically have a whole meal. Here's my suggested menu using this entree.

Dinner Menu

Beeksteak and Kidney Pie
Mashed Turnips, Fresh Peas
Baking Powder Biscuits, Honey
Chocolate Cream Pie, Tea

BEEFSTEAK AND KIDNEY PIE

Soak 1 veal kidney in cold salted water for 30 minutes. Cut 1 pound beef chuck or round steak in 1-inch cubes. Drain kidney and cut into even smaller cubes. Let ½ sliced onion brown slowly in lard, butter or margarine, then add meats and brown well on all sides. Add 1½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ½ tablespoon Worcestershire sauce and ½ cup boiling water. Simmer slowly for 2 hours or until very tender. Mix 1 tablespoon flour with ¼ cup cold water and stir into the meat to thicken it. Transfer to baking dish or individual casseroles and cover top with thin pastry with hole in center for escape of steam. Bake 30 minutes in a 375 degree oven. Serves 4.

A chocolate cream pie will finish the meal with a flourish that is appreciated by most persons. Following is a recipe for making the pie:

CHOCOLATE CREAM PIE

Add 3 squares unsweetened chocolate to 2½ cups milk and heat in a double boiler. When the chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Combine 1 cup sugar, 6 tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon salt. Add gradually to chocolate mixture and cook until thickened, stirring constantly; then continue cooking 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add 2 slightly beaten egg yolks gradually, stirring vigorously; cook for 2 minutes longer. Add 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Cool, turn into pie shell. Beat 2-egg whites until stiff, add 4 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating after each addition until sugar is well blended. Then continue beating until mixture stands in peaks. Pile lightly on filling. Bake in moderate oven, 300 degrees, for 15 minutes.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Banquets, luncheons and annual meetings galore are in the offing for next week. What with social activities in the clubs curbed for the duration, these yearly powwows are the main social didos of the organizations . . . plenty important to hard-working members.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Come Tuesday, June 1, members of the Park View Woman's Club will hie themselves to Joppa Lodge, 4209 Ninth Street Northwest, for the annual banquet. Time is 7 p. m. Theme of the event is "Friendship and Flowers." Furthermore, there is quite a lengthy program consisting of welcoming, recognition and acceptance speeches. Mrs. William O. Gale introduces the honor guests—Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ellis Logan, dean of past presidents of the D. C. Federation; Mrs. Edward T. Perkins, founder, Park View Woman's Club; Mrs. George Sward, president, Takoma Park Women's Club, and Mrs. Frank J. MacMaugh, president of the Petworth Woman's Club.

Mrs. Gale turns over the gavel to the new president, Mrs. Pierce B. Ashburn. Other newly elected officers are: Mrs. Lawrence E. Murray, first vice president; Mrs. Waugh Heygster, recording secretary; Mrs. Carl Alsop, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John McKay, treasurer, and Mrs. Gale, parliamentarian.

Doings of the Day

American University Alumni celebrates fiftieth anniversary with tea honoring the original faculty of the college of arts and sciences, 5 to 7 p. m., in Great Hall of the Women's Residence on the campus. Those being honored include: Dr. John E. Bentley, Miss Mary Louise Brown, dean of women; Dr. and Mrs. William Holton, Dr. and Mrs. Will Hutchins, Dr. and Mrs. Delos Kinsman, Dr. Henry C. Leineweber, Miss Ruberta Olds, Dr. and Mrs. Walter F. Shenton and Dr. and Mrs. George B. Woods.

Bits of This and That . . .

AMERICAN NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S CLUB holds annual meeting and election of officers Monday, 4:30 p. m., in the clubroom, 1604 Twentieth Street Northwest . . . The Crown Princess Martha of Norway was ranking guest at luncheon given by Mrs. James Stewart Cushman and Mrs. Peter Augustas Jay in honor of the executive committee of the World's Y. W. C. A., Thursday at the Sulgrave Club. Among the other distinguished guests are Dr. Wu Yifang, president of Ginling College, China, and a member of the National committee of the Y. W. C. A. in China, and Miss Ruth Woodsmall, general secretary of the WORLD'S Y. W. C. A. . . . Due to the blackout scheduled for last night, the Michigan Alumnae Association changed its meeting to June 4, 7 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Leonard Scheele, 3521 Johnson Avenue, Bethesda, Md. . . . The Intermediate group of the JEWISH CONSUMPTIVE RELIEF SOCIETY is rejoicing over having reached the $3000 goal set for the Second War Loan Drive. However, a benefit luncheon and card party has been slated for June 8, 1 p. m., at the Far East Restaurant . . . Come Tuesday the Washington Alumnae Chapter of ALPHA PHI INTERNATIONAL SORORITY will hold its final dinner meeting of the season, 6:45 p. m.

SHOP AND RUN

'Make It Do'

This is the story of tiny creatures that live in Washington—but never have any housing problem! Quite impartial to diet, they'd just as soon eat last year's bathing suit as your precious fur coat! These all-season guests are the moths that do about 200 million dollars' worth of damage annually, and this year we won't be able to replace those precious garments.

Unfortunately our clothes can't take care of themselves. They must be cleaned, spots removed, hung properly, aired, and protected against moths. But the preventive attention you give them now requires much less time and money than trying to save them after the damage is done!

Here are the items you will need to insure both clothes and household goods against the unhealthy appetites of these little pests.

GARMENT BAGS

Although garment bags do not kill moths, they will keep them out indefinitely if the bag is tightly sealed. Before hanging clothes in them be sure that they're free from moths. A good buy in cedarized garment bags is a box style size 26x60, which holds eight garments. It's air-tight, damp-proof, and also prevents your clothes from gathering dust. 89 cents.

MOTHPROOF YOUR CLOSETS

Let's really do a housecleaning job with the closet! Take all of the clothes out and brush or clean them thoroughly. Seal the cracks in the plaster and baseboard. Cover door frames with felt gaskets so that the closet is airtight. Then get a container of the stuff that kills moth eggs and larvae and hang it up in your closet. The concentrated fumes given off kill the moths. However, the odor doesn't cling and you can wear your clothes immediately (the poor moths don't stand a chance!) 79 cents. Refills, too.

Another useful item is individual moth fighters — square shaped with a hole in the center. You can slip them over clothes hangers, in bureau drawers, trunks, or inside the piano case. Four for 19 cents.

PACK UP YOUR WOOLENS

Handle those woolens tenderly as you pack them away! Moth crystals should be scattered between the folds of clothing, blankets, or draperies before you store them. These crystals actually kill all moth life. Keep the box or chest in which they're packed as airtight as possible. An additional precaution is to wrap layers of newspaper around them, but seal the open edges. 69 cents for crystals.

BUREAU DRAWERS

If the moths had a say-so about the way they'd like to die, we'll bet they'd choose these pine-scented moth balls! They accomplish the same nasty job of killing moth life, without imparting the usual smell of moth balls. Unlike ordinary moth balls, they don't congeal or harden, and the pine odor disappears immediately. You can, of course, use these for storing your woolens. 75 cents a pound.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Once the moths start working on the upholstery they'll really eat you out of house and home! One of the best methods of cure and prevention is to use a cedarized spray that will kill the moths. Brush and air draperies before you spray them. Clean rugs and carpets on both sides, air, and then spray. While they're still damp roll them in newspapers and tie. If you're using them during the summer, spray once a month.

This spray also kills those household pests including mosquitoes and a few other unmentionables that are unwelcome guests. The odor doesn't cling and the spray is stainless. Pint size, 85 cents, spray, 25 cents.

If you're storing your rugs at home you may want a rug bag. This one is 9x12, holds two rugs. $2.19.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Orange juice probably will be the first food—in addition to the formula—to which the young baby will be introduced. The bottle-baby gets it right along with the formula, no matter what his age. The nursing baby will have his tastes of it, not so much because of his vital need for it, but chiefly as a preparation for the time when he will need it.

Every human being needs "live" foods to provide that particular element without which scurvy develops. Breast milk is live food. So is cows' milk as it comes direct from the bossy. But by the time the consumer gets cow's milk, after time and necessary pasteurization processing, it has this live element considerably diminished. So baby must get it in some other form.

Orange juice, because it is good-tasting and offers a rich supply of vitamin C, is the food oftenest chosen to represent an alkaline element after digestion, and so in addition to providing vitamin C tends to balance the acid-ash foods.

While baby may wrinkle his nose somewhat when he first tastes this strange food, it isn't long before he is swallowing it down with noticeable enjoyment.

The amount of juice for the young baby is no more than one teaspoonful—as a beginning—diluted with an equal amount of boiled water. Strain the juice and use naturally sweet oranges or add a bit of sugar if the juice seems tart. We want baby to like these first additions to the diet so that he will be eager for more.

Every day increase the amount by a little until the baby of 3 months, or thereabouts, will be taking 1½ ounces of orange juice midway between the 6 a. m. and 10 a. m. feedings, and midway between the 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. feedings, 3 ounces in all.

This can be given by spoon or bottle until baby is old enough to sit up, at which times the change can be made to a small cup from which baby will get henceforth both water and juice. The best time to give the daily doses of vitamin D is just before the orange juice.

If tomato juice is used (strained juice from canned tomatoes) twice as much will be needed. But grapefruit or lemon juice can both be substituted, the latter used undiluted right with the formula. Add it just at feeding time.

Some babies can take none of these and for them a tablet providing vitamin C will have to be substituted. Whatever the source, our babies with their cooked foods and pasteurized, boiled or processed formulas must have vitamin C every day.

Our leaflet, "Food Elements," explains in detail the different food elements and vitamins needed by growing children, and their best sources. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Myrtle Eldred with your request in care of this newspaper.

United Nations Club

The United Nations Club, whose members represent some 30 countries allied in war against the Axis, presents a play about one of the human-interest sidelights of the war tonight and tomorrow night at the Wardman Park Theater. Members of the club who had professional acting experience in civilian life will portray the principal roles in "Flare Path," a drama concerned with the worries of the wives of Royal Air Force fliers who wait for news of their husbands off on bombing missions.

The club, whose hundreds of members include practically all the ranking foreign representatives—both civilian and military—in Washington, is staging the performances to raise funds with which to continue its work of creating firmer bonds of good-fellowship among the delegates of the United Nations.

It selected "Flare Path" on the basis of the play's success in London, where it was the only play Mrs. Roosevelt saw on her visit in England.

Betty Fike Goes to Florida To Wed J. T. Mitchell, Jr.

Helen Moloney and Marita Kelso Also Among Recent Spring Brides

In the Community Chapel at Miami Beach, Fla., on Sunday, Miss Betty Lou Fike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Karl Fike of Wesley Heights, became the bride of J. T. Mitchell, jr., also of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Mitchell. The bridegroom is in the United States Army Air Forces. The ceremony at 8 o'clock was performed by Wallace Fiske, U. S. Army chaplain, and was followed by a wedding breakfast at the Versailles Hotel.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white organdy gown and a veil of bridal illusion held by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Betty Edwards of Washington, her only attendant, was in pale green marquisette and lace and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and daisies. James Marsden served as best man.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the University of Maryland. Mrs. Mitchell is a member of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority and the bridegroom a member of "Pershing Rifles." The bride's father is director of Doctors Hospital.

White—Moloney

Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. White, who were married in the Church fo the Nativity on Saturday, May 22, will be at home at 3401 Prospect Avenue, when they return from their wedding trip.

Before her marriage the bride was Miss Helen Marie Moloney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Moloney. Mr. White's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles White of Paterson, N. J. The Rev. L. A. McGlone officiated at the ceremony, and Mr. Maloney gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride wore a white lace and satin gown made with a train and carried a white prayerbook. Her veil was of white net and fell from a coronet of orange blossoms. Miss Catherine Moloney was her sister's only attendant, and Donald Peese was best man. Ushers were Hayne Jones, William Humphries and James Hadd. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

The bridegroom attended Georgetown Foreign Service School and is a member of Delta Phi Epsilon Fraternity.

Murray—Kelso

Now on their honeymoon to New York and Connectict are Lieut. George Francis Murray, U. S. A. A. F., and his bride, the former Miss Marita Frances Kelso. Their marrigae took place May 20 in Holy Trinity Church, Glen Burnie, Md.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kelso of Linthicum Heights, Md. The bridegroom is the son of Raymond B. Murray, director of the United States Army Motion Picture Service, and Mrs. Murray of Washington. The Rev. George Bowling read the service, held at 10 o'clock, and was assisted by Raymond B. Murray, jr., of St. Mary's Seminary, Roland Park, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride's gown was of ivory faille taffeta made with a fitted bodice and long train. Her full-length veil of ivory illusion was held with a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a white satin prayerbook covered with white orchids. Miss Barbara Kelso, only attendant for her sister, was in orchid organza and a halo veil of the same color. She carried a bouquet of snapdragons and sweet peas. James E. Murray was best man for his brother. Lieutenant and Mrs. Murray will live in Bainbridge, Ga., where the bridegroom is stationed.

Helen Bedell Is Wed to Paul Stamer

St. Margaret's Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday at noon of Miss Helen Irene Bedell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Montague Bedell, and Paul Stamer, son of Mr. and Mrs. August D. Stamer of Wright City, Mo. The Rev. Armand Eyler officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a wedding breakfast at the Kennedy-Warren.

Mr. Bedell gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a Navy blue print frock with navy and white accessories and a corsage bouquet of white orchids. The bride's sister, Miss Beverly Bedell, who was maid of honor and only attendant, was in a plum-colored frock with navy and white accessories and wore a shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses. Harry M. Bedell, jr., brother of the bride, was best man.

After a wedding trip to New York the couple will return to Washington to make their home.

Here for the wedding were the bridegroom's parents; his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. August Stamer, jr., and Miss Yvonne Stamer, all of Wright City.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Maryland in the 1942 class of College of Home Economics and was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Mr. Stamer is a graduate of Kirksville College in Kirksville, Mo.

Protecting Celebrities Is All in Day's Work for Captain of Capitol Police

But He'll Never Forget Visit of Prime Minister

By Martha Rhyne

One man at least who certainly won't soon forget the recent Churchill visit to the Capitol is Capt. William S. Orthman, head of the Capitol Police, upon whose shoulders rested the responsibility for the Prime Minister's safe journey through the Capitol. Although he considers the Prime Minister one of the most "marvelous personages in the world today," the typically burly "captain of the guard" had no stars in his eyes while discussing the famous Churchill. For the captain's life for the past 10 years as a member of the Capitol Police force has been a series of responsibilities for world figures. He's been the protective right arm for more famous persons than the average person can even name.

Churchill One Who Spurned Precaution

Orthman well remembers the awed silence which cloaked the Capitol like a protective blanket when the Prime Minister made his stirring speech before Congress. He will tell you that at 4 o'clock on May 19 the Prime Minister was on his way out of the vast spaces of our national governmental headquarters after meeting and chatting with practically everybody inside. A long line of shiny black automobiles was drawn up carefully beside the Senate wing, where celebrities make their exits. Up through the center of the bristling guard strolled the amiable Prime Minister. As casually as he would move about his own home he passed the guard, ignored the strategically parked car and strolled out across the wide concrete walkway onto the curb—just at the place where you probably would have hailed a cab after a Capitol visit.

Spurning precaution, the famous son of an American woman twirled his hat on his cane, smiled broadly to the small crowd and to the armed escort, held up two fingers in the famous victory sign and disappeared into the roomy vehicle which had followed his unscheduled walk. The captain sighed with relief.

Was 27 Years On Chicago Force

Well liked and respected by Capitol personnel from the Vice President to the greenest rookie on the police force, the seasoned captain worked for 27 years in nearly every department of Chicago's toughened police force.

By way of explaining his statement that no serious disturbances occur on the Capitol Grounds he pointed out the case of the sailor, who, just the other day, arose in the gallery to condemn poll tax to a surprised and bored-with-it-all Congress. Hustled away by an alert but amused guard, this creation of excitement marked the rare and not-too-serious frays which sometimes occur in the Capitol's "Comedy of Errors." Besides quelling like disturbances, the captain's duties consist mainly of receiving and carrying out orders for official escorts which come directly from the offices of the Senate and House sergeant at arms.

Crowds No Longer Pester the Guards

The visits of Churchill, Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and the Presidents of many countries are all in a day's work for the captain.

Unruly crowds no longer pester the guards. The humane captain, who admits he's very much married, realizes that people are now concerned with the most famous persons in their lives, their loved ones in the armed forces. A glimpse of a world leader isn't so sought after, now that everyone has a war job to do.

And Captain Orthman has a war job, too, one that he is doing so well that hardly anyone knows about it. He and his force of 150 guards protect the most valuable spot on earth—and the visitors to which the Capitol is host.

Purely Personal

Mme. Fotich, wife of the Yugoslav Ambassador, will entertain at a small luncheon today in honor of Milena, noted artist, who is a guest at the embassy.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Cheney are in New York for a visit at the St. Regis.

Mrs. Stevenson, who is known professionally as Dr. Suzanne Silvercruys, is currently at work upon a sculptured portrait bust of Maj. Gen. Chennault, which she will return to Washington to finish in the near future.

Dudley F. Malone Among Guests in Theater Party

"Is that Winston Churchill?" was the question any number of people asked at last night's performance of "Flare Path" at the Wardman Park Theater.

The man in question arriving with quite a large party, certainly looked like Britain's Prime Minister, but he turned out to be Dudley Field Malone. The latter's resemblance to Churchill is so marked that Malone played the role of the Prime Minister in the film, "Mission to Moscow."

In town for a brief visit, Mr. Malone was among the theater guests of Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Norman Littell. Earlier, with Mr. and Mrs. Littell and Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, he had attended a small dinner given by Mrs. Charles Clark, mother of Gen. Mark Clark.

Others in the theater party included Admiral and Mrs. William Glassford, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and her guest, Mrs. Oswald B. Lord of New York; Representative Henry Jackson, Dr. Ralph Lemkin and Comdr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney.

Capital Girl To Wed Today In Boston

Miss Betty Stewart-Richardson, daughter of Maj. Robert M. Stewart-Richardson, former Attache of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Stewart-Richardson will be married today in Boston to Lieut. Edgar Lakin, U. S. N. R., of York Harbor, Me., and Boston. The ceremony was arranged hastily owing to wartime conditions, and will take place at 5 o'clock at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

The bride-to-be has been in Miami, Fla., while her father has been with the Ferry Command. The bridegroom-elect, also formerly stationed in Miami, has been transferred to a New England post and he and his bride will take a house on Cape Cod for the summer.

The bride will have as her attendants Miss Marion Norris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. Brison Norris of Washington; Mrs. David A. Robertson, the former Miss Joan Dodd, and Miss Audrey Stifel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Stifel of St. Louis, old friends of the Stewart-Richardsons, who have recently come to Washington to live.

The granddaughter of the late Alexander M. Stewart of New York, the bride spent much of her early life in England. She attended the Todhunter School in New York and was presented to society in Washington at a tea dance at the 1925 F Street Club in 1941.

Lieutenant Lakin is a graduate of Williams College and took postgraduate work at Harvard University.

Churches to Pay Homage to War Heroes in Memorial Day Rites Tomorrow

G.A.R. to Hold Services At Arlington

Washington churchmen tomorrow will pay homage to heroes of this and other wars in combined patriotic and religious services commemorating Memorial Day.

Among the highlights will be the annual services of the Grand Army of the Republic at the Arlington Amphitheater, where the principal speaker will be Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commanding general of the United States Army Service Forces. The service at 11:45 a. m. will be preceded by the laying of wreaths on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb at 11 a. m.

Chevy Chase Services

Members who have joined "the church triumphant" will be memorialized at services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, Western Avenue near Chevy Chase Circle.

Prayers for men and women of the armed forces will be a highlight of Memorial Day rites at St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Capitol Heights, Md., of which the Rev. R. Donald Clare is pastor.

The Potomac Lodge No. 5, F. A. A. M. will attend services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Congress Street Methodist Church, Georgetown. The Rev. Dorsey K. Sturgis, pastor, and assistant chaplain of that lodge, will preach on "The Heroic Example." The Potomac Lodge laid the church's cornerstone June 2, 1829.

A feature of Memorial Day services at Fifteenth Street Christian Church will be the addition of 12 blue and 1 gold stars to the church's service flag.

The Fort Stevens Post No. 32 and the Tank Corps Post No. 19, American Legion, will attend services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Petworth Baptist Church, Seventh and Randolph Streets Northwest. Joseph A. Walker is post commander.

A service flag will be dedicated tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Calvary Methodist Church, Mount Pleasant, honoring the congregation's 117 men and women in the armed forces. The flag is a gift of the Young Men's Bowling Team, of which Merle Gilroy is manager.

Gov. Robert S. Kerr will be featured in a special Memorial Day address at 8 o'clock at the Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest. Governor Kerr was a successful oil man prior to becoming Governor in January, of the State of Oklahoma. He is the first native born Oklahoman to ever be elected Governor of the State. He teaches a Sunday school class at the First Baptist Church in Oklahoma City and is one of the outstanding Baptist laymen of the Southwest.

Staff Sergt. Clarence H. Johnston will render piano selections preceding the evening service. Mrs. Dorothy Remsen of the Eastman School of Music, a harpist of distinction, will be the featured guest artist in the service.

Dr. Poling to Talk From Pulpit Here

Dr. Daniel Poling, president of the World Christian Endeavor Society and minister of the Baptist Temple in Philadelphia, will be the guest speaker tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. His subject will be, "Cursing War and Blessing Warriors."

The sermon at the morning service will be delivered by Dr. Paul Douglas, president of American University, who will speak on "The Past Can Guide Us." Henrietta Bagger Plum, mezzo-soprano, will sing Frank La Forge's "Flanders Requiem."

Rabbi Metz to Speak

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, spiritual leader of Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation, and a prominent Jewish scholar, will address the young people of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. on "The Problem of the Minorities in the Post-war World."

Father O'Gara Now Army Chaplain

The Rev. Martin J. O'Gara, S. J., freshman professor of religion at Georgetown University, has been commissioned a first lieutenant in the Army Chaplain Corps and now is undergoing training at Harvard University.

A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., Father O'Gara came to Georgetown in 1940 after completing his tertianship at Auriesville, Pa. He is the fifth Jesuit from the college faculty to become a chaplain in the armed services during this war.

He has taught three years at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, and completed his course in theology at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md.

Dr. Sorrick Again Heads Synod Body

Dr. Raymond C. Sorrick, pastor of the St. Luke Lutheran Church, Silver Spring, Md., and former Baltimore cleric, was reelected president of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland at its 124th annual session this week at Gettysburg (Pa.) Theological Seminary, the Associated Press reported from that place.

The 300 clerical and lay delegates also renamed the Rev. J. Frank Fife of Baltimore, secretary; Vergil W. Doub of Middletown, Md., treasurer, and the Rev. W. G. Minnick of Baltimore, statistical secretary.

Dr. J. Gould Wickey of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the United Lutheran Church's board of education, urged encouragement of young men to enter the ministry to avoid what he said would be a future shortage of young ministers.

Among Washingtonians elected to special committees were Dr. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, ministerial students; Dr. Henry Manken, pastor of St. Mark's-Incarnation Church, examining, and the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, Atonement Church, synodical missions.

FBI Chief Praises Church For Work Among Juveniles

This is the "gang" at a typical Saturday night community entertainment in the dramatic hall of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest

The program of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church in Washington "is demonstrating what a church can do in a downtown area of potentially high juvenile delinquency," says J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in an article appearing in the May issue of the Christian Advocate. It is entitled "The New Disinherited."

HOOVER

"For more than 70 consecutive Saturday nights," wrote Hoover, "the church has been giving programs for children of the neighborhood. About 300 boys and girls, accompanied by their parents, attend. Two hours of moving pictures, band music and entertainment are offered free of charge. Sunday is always a busy day; meals are served at the church for the convenience of those wishing to attend services from 9 a. m. until the close of the evening service at 8:30.

"Interest groups within age groups' is the principle on which the programs of the church are organized," continues the article. "Community boys' and girls' clubs, dramatics and handicraft groups, and a variety of other projects, including a Chinese church, show how programs can be developed to meet the needs of the community."

Dr. John W. Rustin, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, is Mount Vernon pastor.

Two Congregations To Join in Services

The congregations of Calvary and First Baptist and New York Avenue Presbyterian Churches will join in a union service tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the first-named place, Eighth and H Streets Northwest. Dr. Peter Marshall will speak on "The Saint of the Rank and File."

Bautz Named Federation Unit Director

By Robert Tate Allen
Post Church Editor

Donald F. Bautz, prominent Lutheran youth leader, has been named new director of the Washington Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, effective June 1, it was learned yesterday.

BAUTZ

Bautz succeeds Grover L. Hartman, who resigned to enter a conscientious objectors' camp in Maryland.

The new defense commissioner comes from Baltimore, where he has been studying at Johns Hopkins University, and plans to continue undergraduate work at George Washington University.

He expects to matriculate at the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Mount Airy, Philadelphia, in the fall of 1944.

Bautz was born in Buffalo 26 years ago, was graduated from Bennett High School there and after five years in the business world, entered Wagner College, Staten Island, N. Y.

He is now on the executive committee of the Luther League of America and is former president of the New York State Luther League. He was prominent in Baltimore Lutheran youth work. He is single.

"FLING OUT THE BANNER, LET IT FLOAT"
. . . GEORGE W. DOANE . . .

Fling out the banner! let it float
Skyward and seaward, high and wide.
The sun that lights its shining folds,
The Cross on which the Saviour died!

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This ringing trumpet call, pulsating with a vigorous spirit of heroism, was written for a flag-raising ceremony of a girls' school. The banner figure was inspired by the passage from Psalms, "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear Thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth."

Knights Templar Rites

The Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop Coadjutor of the Maryland Diocese, will address the Knights Templar Ascension Day services Thursday at 8 p. m. at Ascension Episcopal Church, Twelfth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Fifth Baptist Will Honor Dr. Briggs

Dr. John E. Briggs tomorrow will be honored upon the thirty-fourth anniversary of his pastorate of Fifth Baptist Church and also upon his retirement from the active ministry.

DR. BRIGGS

Leading the tributes to Dr. Briggs at 11 a. m. will be Representative Jed Johnson of Oklahoma, for 15 years teacher of the Darlington-Berea Bible Class, and George Fraser, president of the D. C. Baptist Convention of Churches.

Dr. Briggs will preach on "The Christian Race," using the same text as when he began his ministerial career 49 years ago. The program has been arranged by the anniversary and retirement service committee. Its members, appointed by Deacon Chairman J. Howard Ingram, follow:

James T. Ellett, chairman; Mrs. B. B. Alsop, Mr. and Mrs. H. Oscar Bryant, Joseph Cannon, Mrs. James G. Compton, James F. Dunn, William M. Gutridge, J. Howard Ingram, C. Clinton James, Edward C. McReady, Wendell D. Moyer, Nell G. Reynolds, Earl K. Scott, J. Elbert Tune, Mrs. Elvin Sanders, J. M. Utterback, Mrs. Helen Webster and Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Woolard.

Nurses to Hear Baccalaureate

The baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of Garfield Memorial Hospital will be preached at the Church of the Epiphany tomorrow at 8 p. m. by the Rev. Charles W. Sheerin, D.D., rector of the church. The graduating class and other nurses from the hospital will march in procession preceded by the choir of the church and a special program of music has been arranged for this service by the choirmaster and organist, Adolf Torovsky.

At 11 o'clock the rector will also preach, on "The Good Earth."

Central Presbyterian Plans Diamond Jubilee Tomorrow

A record of 75 years of Christian service in the Nation's Capital will be celebrated tomorrow at Central Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Irving Streets Northwest.

Services commemorating the Diamond Jubilee of its founding in 1868 will be held in the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., and the pastor, Rev. James H. Taylor, D. D., will preach at 11 a. m. An informal reception will be held from 5 to 7:30 p. m., and the Rev. Fred V. Poagg, pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, Alexandria, Va., and at one time assistant pastor at Central Church, will deliver the sermon at the evening service that will follow the reception.

In its 75 years of existence, Central Church has had but two pastors, the Rev. A. W. Pitzer, D. D., its founder, and Dr. Taylor, and for over 30 years it constituted the only church in Washington connected with the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

In 1906 Dr. Pitzer became pastor emeritus and the Rev. Mr. Taylor became pastor. The property at Third and Eye Streets Northwest was sold and a new building begun at the intersection of Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Irving Streets. President Woodrow Wilson, who attended the third Sunday after his inauguration, notified Dr. Taylor in April, 1913, that he and his family would attend regularly. On December 19, 1913, the cornerstone of the new building was laid by the President. It was completed in February, 1914.

On January 23, 1925, a bronze tablet commemorating the organization of the church by Dr. Pitzer, and the membership of President Wilson in the congregation, was unveiled by President Calvin Coolidge.

Property adjacent to the church on Irving Street was acquired in 1921 and used as a community playground for a period of nine years. In 1930 construction was begun on a new Sunday school building, and on Thanksgiving Day, 1930, after the morning service, President Hoover laid the cornerstone of the new building.

Woman's Council To Hear Address By Missionary

Dr. Paul Andress, missionary to Asunction, Paraguay, will address the June luncheon of the Woman's Council of the National City Christian Church, June 1, at 12 noon at the Y. W. C. A. This noted speaker was instrumental in establishing the work in the social center at Aguascalientes, Mexico. In his address he will analyze the relationship of the United States to the Latin-American countries, and will point out how that relationship may be improved.

ANDRESS

Mrs. C. G. Randell, president of the Woman's Council, will preside over the meeting. Special music will be rendered by Mrs. Pauline Holcomb.

Necromancy Sermon Theme

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced." Services are held in all churches and societies at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except in Third Church, at 5 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are invited to attend, the services and the Wednesday evening meeting, at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thou art my hiding place; Thou shalt preserve me from trouble; Thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance." (Psalms 32:7)

62 Stars in Flag

A community Service Flag representing 60 men and 2 women from Brookmont who have entered the armed services will be dedicated at the Brookmont Baptist Church in a special Memorial Day Service tomorrow at 11 a. m. The flag is being sponsored by the Ladies Aid of the church. A committee, composed of Mrs. Josephine Morton, president of the aid; Mrs. Allen H. Davis, and Mrs. Arthur B. Blackmon, has prepared the flag and arranged the program.

One Gold Star will represent Capt. Noel O. Castle, U. S. M. C., reported killed in action at Corregidor. Before entering the service Captain Castle made his home in Brookmont with his brother, Alfred B. Castle.

The Rev. Edmund C. Tull, pastor, will lead the service. Royal H. Carlock, member of the Maryland House of Delegates from Montgomery County, will read the roll call. The address will be delivered by Chaplain (Major) George W. Irby of the Office of the Chief of Chaplains, War Department, Washington. Special music will be presented by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Robert H. Laughlin.

Van Houten to Speak

Dr. H. R. van Houten, counselor of the Netherlands Embassy, will speak on "The Netherlands at War" tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Foundry Methodist Church, as a feature of the University of Christian Living sponsored by the church's young people.

Verhoeven to Speak

John Verhoeven, formerly of Holland, and a well-known Baha'i teacher, will speak tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. in the Baha'i Hall 1308 I Street Northwest, on "Prayer and Meditation."

Bishop Jett Confirms

The Right Rev. Robert Carter Jett, retired bishop of the Southwestern Virginia Episcopal Diocese, will confirm a class tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Grace Episcopal Church, Southwest Parish. The candidates will be presented by the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, rector.

To Address Youths

Mrs. Julia Marie Cobjornsen of Norway will address a joint youth meeting tomorrow at 7 p. m. at Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, First and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Armed Forces' Heavy Usage Of Gas Cited

The present shortage of gasoline for civilians on the Atlantic Seaboard has a definite, although not a direct, relation to the unprecedented and unpredictable overseas demands of the armed forces for petroleum products, the Office of War Information pointed out yesterday as it translated War Department figures on military petroleum requirements in terms of civilian gas rations.

In the 15 days that Maj. Gen. James Doolittle and his 12th Air Force command fought in the skies above Tunisia, their planes used up enough gasoline to empty every tank in every city and village in every State in the Northeast coastal shortage area; and to keep them empty for more than a month.

Million Gallons a Day

Every day that General Doolittle and his men went up over the Mediterranean, their planes consumed 1,100,000 gallons of gasoline. This was high-octane aviation gasoline, which is not the kind used for the automobile.

But the present shortage, as the Petroleum Administration for War makes plain, is not a shortage in supply of product, but in supply of transportation facilities for the product. These different petroleum products, in the main, use the same or equivalent transportation facilities.

Therefore, if a war emergency requires that shipments of high-octane aviation gasoline to the Eastern seaboard be given the right of way, it is inevitable that shipments of regular automobile gas to the same place will have to be delayed.

Gen Doolittle's 15-day flight burned up 16,500,000 gallons of aviation gas. This is 1,550,000 gallons more than the 14,950,000 gallon monthly ration of regular gas for the Atlantic seaboard section.

Every gas tank in Baltimore would be bone dry for 24 hours if the city were to guarantee the gasoline to enable 300 Liberator bombers to fly from a British base, bomb Berlin and come home again.

Comparisons Cited

Such a round-trip engagement eats up more than 525,000 gallons of gas. Baltimore's daily gasoline ration demand is 520,000 gallons, which would just about take care of the raid. It would not be the same kind of gas, but would require similar transportation facilities.

If a flight command in Russia or China were obliged to send up 50 fighter planes for just two hours to repel an enemy raid, and if it depended on Washington, D. C., for its gas, the Nation's Capital would have to shut off every gasoline-run motor for nearly one hour. This maneuver would consume 11,000 gallons of aviation gas. Washington's daily ration demand for regular gas is 336,000 gallons, or 14,000 gallons an hour.

D. C. Jews Hold Memorial Rites For 4 Killed in War

Four men of the local Jewish community who laid down their lives in this war were eulogized last night at memorial services and massing of the colors at Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I Streets Northwest.

They were Lieuts. Samuel Futrovsky, and John Lewis, both of the Army Air Forces, Lieut. Howard Baer, United States Army, and Army Chaplain Alexander Goode.

Tributes to those and others who died in this war were led by Chaplain Arye Lev of the Army Chief of Chaplain's Office; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, Adas Israel spiritual leader, and Irwin M. Gensberg, commander of Washington Post 58, Jewish War Veterans.

The Fort Stevens Post No. 32, National Cathedral Post No. 10; the State Department, Disabled American Veterans; Jewish War Veterans and their auxiliaries participated in the services. Chaplain Lev spoke in place of Theodore McKeldin, Baltimore's new mayor who was unable to attend. The audience sang during the blackout.

Senator Kilgore Confined to Home

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia has been ill and confined to his home for about a week, his secretary, Miss Radle Herndon, said last night. He is reported to be suffering from a gall bladder infection, and although his condition is not considered serious, it is not known when he will be able to return to his office, she said.

Simple Rites Mark Funeral Of Edsel Ford

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, May 28.—Simple but impressive funeral services were held today for Edsel Bryant Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co. who died Wednesday.

The rites were held in the Gray Stone Chapel of Christ Church in suburban Grosse Pointe, where not very long ago Edsel Ford saw his son Benson married, and more recently gave his daughter Josephine in marriage.

Although the services were intended to be private several hundred friends and business associates of Edsel Ford were admitted as well as members of the family. Outside the chapel additional hundreds waited to see the casket brought out.

In keeping with the simplicity that marked the life of Edsel Ford, the service was brief; there was no personal eulogy and there were no honorary pallbearers. From the church chapel the casket was taken to Woodlawn Cemetery and placed temporarily in the mausoleum of the late J. L. Hudson, Detroit merchant and uncle of Mrs. Edsel Ford. It will be removed later to a vault to be constructed by the family.

Last to enter the chapel and first to leave were members of the Ford family. Mrs. Edsel Ford was escorted by her youngest son, William, a naval cadet. They were followed by the elder Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, Next came Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford 2d., Mr. and Mrs. Benson Ford, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Buhl Ford 2d. Behind them sat Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kanzler, the latter a sister of Mrs. Edsel Ford.

Among those who attended the services were Governor Charles Edison of New Jersey, with his family, and Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. William S. Knudsen.

Grenade Blast In England Kills Takoma Park Man

With American Forces Somewhere in England, May 28 (INS).—An American soldier was killed, another was wounded and four were slightly injured when an antitank grenade exploded accidentally during exercises here. The men were loading the grenades on a truck, an Army announcement said.

Corpl. Edward O. Kihlbom of Takoma Park, Md., was killed and Pvt. Willis T. Frantz of Cumberland, Md., was injured. Slightly wounded were Pvt. First Class J. H. Bussard of Sandy Springs, Md., Corpl. J. W. Broughton of Baltimore, Md., Pvt. Morton Breakstone of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Pvt. First Class Vito Farrazzo of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Corporal Kihlbom, 20, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Kihlbom, 612 Elm Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

His father said last night that he was called to service with the Maryland National Guard Company of Silver Spring about 2½ years ago while completing senior work at Montgomery Blair High School.

Mr. Kihlbom is a retired employe of the Government Printing Office and Mrs. Kihlbom is a voice teacher.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia. Christopher J. San Fellipo et al., plaintiffs, vs. the unknown heirs at law, devisees and alienees of James Whitefield (former Archbishop of Baltimore, State of Maryland) et al., defendants. Civil Action. File No. 19468. Order of publication. The object of this action is to obtain a judgment establishing of record by adverse possession plaintiffs' title to the following described real estate: PARCEL NO. 1. "The East 17 feet front on 'C' Street by the full depth of Original Lot 11 in Square 763"; PARCEL NO. 2. "The West 9 feet 7 inches front on 'C' Street by depth of 109 feet 6 inches of the Public alley 15 feet wide which opens out into said 'C' Street as laid down upon the original subdivision of Square 763, and which lies East of and contiguous to the East line of Lot 11 in said Square." Upon motion of the plaintiffs, it is by the Court this 20th day of May, 1943, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs at law, devisees and alienees of James Whitefield (former Archbishop of Baltimore, State of Maryland) cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring one month after the day of the first publication hereof, otherwise this action will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy hereof be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post prior to the return day, longer and other publication being dispensed with for satisfactory cause shown. EDWARD C. EICHER, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By HILDA MARIE GOWEN, Deputy Clerk. 22,29,5

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — One Woman U. S. O. — By Milton Caniff

I DON'T KNOW WHO I AM—BUT I AM NOT GOING TO SIT HERE WALLOWING IN MY OWN TEARS...
I MUST BE AN AMERICAN—AND THOSE ARE AMERICAN MEN OUT THERE—AND THEY TELL ME I AM THE ONLY WHITE WOMAN IN THE AREA...
GET ME SOME CLOTHES, FLOWERS FOR MY HAIR—AND SEND FOR THE CHAPLAIN...
HIGH CHIEF

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

YOU FATHEADS! THIS OLD BIDDY IS NO DEFENSE WORKER! SHE'S THE WATCH-DOG OF A GIRL I'M GIVING A HEAVY PLAY TO!
SHE LIVES AT THE DOLLY MADISON—SAM TURNED THAT UP!
SURE! SO DOES PATTI—AND SO DOES SALLY O'KEENE, A SKIRT I GAVE THE AIR TO! WAIT A MINUTE! THIS BEGINS TO ADD UP!
THE OLD DAME IS A POLICE-WOMAN! OR A FEDERAL AGENT—AND PATTI IS ONE OF HER STOOGES! WHAT A FINE WHIPSAW THEY'VE MADE OF ME!
LITTLE INNOCENT PATTI BO-PEEP! HA! NO FLAPPER EVER MADE A CHUMP OUT OF LOU VARZONI AND GOT AWAY WITH IT! HAND ME THAT PHONE!

MICKEY FINN — Normalcy! — By Lank Leonard

GOOD NEWS AT LAST, EH, MICKEY?
AND HOW! BOYOBOY! UNCLE PHIL HAS LOST HIS LUCKY CHARM—WAS ROBBED OF ALL THE MONEY HE'D WON GAMBLING—AND HAS BEEN GIVEN THE AIR BY THAT WIDOW!
THAT'S YOUR IDEA OF GOOD NEWS, EH?
SURE! MY UNCLE PHIL CAN'T STAND PROSPERITY—IT MEANS HE'S BACK TO NORMAL AGAIN!
WELL—HE SURE CAME THROUGH FOR YOU JUST IN TIME—NOW YOU CAN SHOVE OFF WITHOUT ANY WORRIES!
YEAH! IT'S SURE A LOAD OFF MY MIND! LET'S TAKE A WALK OVER TO THE BASE!
I WONDER WHICH ONE WE'LL BE ASSIGNED TO, MICKEY—AND WHERE WE'LL GO?
WHO KNOWS! BUT I KNOW WHERE I'D LIKE TO GO! TO THE PACIFIC—FOR A CRACK AT THOSE DIRTY YAPS!

MR. AND MRS. — Husband's Shouldn't Say Such Things — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

I OUGHT TO CALL UP MRS. GADDER AND FIND OUT HOW SHE IS S'MATTER? IS SHE SICK?
NOT VERY. ONLY—I KNOW IF I CALL HER UP SHE'LL KEEP ME HALF AN HOUR ON THE PHONE, DESCRIBING SYMPTOMS TERRIBLE!
WELL, IT HAS TO BE DONE. I'LL CHOKE HER OFF AS SOON AS I CAN
OKAY. YOU'LL FIND ME IN THE NEXT ROOM WHEN YOU'RE THROUGH (AFTER THE PHONE CALL)
DIDN'T I SAY I'D BE HALF AN HOUR?
YEAH. I COULDN'T HELP HEARING YOU WERE TELLING HER YOUR TROUBLES MOST OF THE TIME

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Ways and Means — By Frank Martinek

I—I MUST CONFESS, BUTCH, I COMPLETELY FORGOT ABOUT SUMMER VACATION—
WELL—WE OLDER KIDS DIDN'T!
OF COURSE WE'LL HAVE TO DISCUSS THIS—UH—SUPPOSING WE MEET IN THE AUDITORIUM?
O.K.
I'VE GOT TO PROMISE THEM SOMETHING—WHAT?
GOLLY! AT THE MOMENT I—I DON'T KNOW—
BETTER MAKE IT GOOD—PROMISES SHOULD NEVER BE BROKEN TO CHILDREN Y'KNOW
BELOW IS THE EVIDENCE OF LOOK-OUT'S WARNING...A FEATHERY WAKE THAT MARKS THE PERISCOPE OF AN ENEMY SUBMARINE
WINSLOW AND JONES HAVE HAD A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE BUNDS ATTACK AND WITNESS THE DESTRUCTION OF AN ENEMY SUB BY DEPTH BOMBS
QUENTIN, SOME OF OUR NAVY'S CRITICS SAY THAT GERMAN SUBMARINE STRATEGISTS ARE OUTSMARTING AND OUTTHINKING OUR U.S. ANTISUBMARINE STRATEGISTS, CHARGING LACK OF NEW IDEAS AND LACK OF IMAGINATION...BUT I BELIEVE THEY ARE WRONG...WE ARE DOING EVERYTHING POSSIBLE. BUT TIME SEEMS TO BE WORKING AGAINST US.
NOW THAT WE HAVE A PART IN PLANNING THE WAYS AND MEANS OF COMBATING SUBMARINES, I HAVE SOME IDEAS THAT MUST BE WORKED OUT IN THE LABORATORY. HURRY—HURRY...WE MUST GET TO WASHINGTON!!!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

HOW ABOUT ME JOINING THE WAVES?
BUT, MYRTLE, DON'T YOU THINK YOU'RE JUST A LITTLE SMALL TO BE A WAVE.
HEY POP! DO YOU THINK I COULD MAKE THE RIPPLES?

JOE PALOOKA — Generals & Colonels — By Ham Fisher

GENERAL LOBER AND COLONEL ZINT, I WELCOME YOU TO OUR COUNTRY.
THANK YOU, YOUR MAJESTY, AND ON BEHALF OF MY COUNTRY AND OUR ARMY—
PARDON ME, IT'S NOT YOUR MAJESTY—THIS IS A DEMOCRACY NOW. I'M JUST PLAIN MR. PRESIDENT—
I BEG YOUR PARDON, MR. PRESIDENT. HOWEVER, MAY WE EXTEND OUR GREAT GRATITUDE TO YOU AND YOUR PEOPLE FOR THE GREAT SERVICE—
—YOU HAVE RENDERED US, WE WELCOME YOU AS ONE OF OUR ALLIES. AH—I SEE PRIVATE JOE PALOOKA AND PRIVATE LEEMY.
PARDON ME, GENERAL, THIS IS GENERAL PALOOKA AND COLONEL LEEMY??
"AHEM-I-WHY OF COURSE—"
IT HADDA BE, SIR—I'M VERY EMBARRASSED. I'LL EXPLAIN LATER.
UH HELLO, HOMER—
UH—YES—UH—CONGRATULATIONS, COLONEL.
UH A BIT UNUSUAL—BUT I THINK I UNDERSTAND.

JANE ARDEN — Only a Girl — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

HERE COMES THE OWNER OF THE GREEN CAR—C. A. RATT—SO FAR HE HASN'T MADE A FALSE STEP—
OKAY—I'LL TAKE OVER NOW—
IF HE HASN'T ALREADY PASSED ON THOSE PLANS WE'VE GOT HIM STOPPED—
VERY CLEVER—VERY CLEVER—I NEVER LEFT A TRACE—THESE PLANS WILL WIN ME AN IRON CROSS
I WILL WAIT AND SEE IF ANYONE IS FOLLOWING ME—
HUMPH! ONLY THAT GIRL HUNTING A ROOM!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

CHALMERS, ELIMINATED—THE ALLIES' SECRET MASTER CODE BOOK ACQUIRED—ITS BEEN A PROFITABLE MORNING. BUT NOW I MUST BE ON MY WAY.
AS THE PSEUDO-COLLINS TOPS HIS BRIEF CASE SHUT, SUPERMAN ACTS WITH LIGHTNING SPEED, SWIFTLY HE REPLACES THE CODE BOOK WITH ANOTHER BOOK, SNATCHED OFF THE TABLE...
LATER...
"NONAME" WILL BE PLEASED!
"NONAME"! I HAD A HUNCH HE WAS INVOLVED IN THIS INTRIGUE—THAT'S WHY I'VE GIVEN HIS UNREELING ENOUGH ROPE TO HANG BOTH OF THEM!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

DONALD DUCK — Darn That Snapper! — By Walt Disney

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

HURRAY! OL' BONES IS RAISING HIS HEAD!
WE'VE PULLED HIM THROUGH, KIDS!
GOSH, DOC, YOU'VE BEEN WORKING OVER HIM FOR HOURS! HOW CAN WE THANK YOU?
IF YOU'VE KEPT YOUR WORD AND NOT TIPPED OFF THE POLICE ABOUT ME—IT'S PLENTY! OH, OH, I HEAR MERRY'S PLANE—
NO! IT'S A MOUNTIE! YOU-YOU-KIDS HAVE DOUBLE-CROSSED ME!—I'LL—

Midwest River Floods Reach Record Stage

By the Associated Press

The Mississippi and Arkansas Rivers both reached all-time record heights yesterday in their destructive rampages with the Mississippi circling Cairo, Ill., to form a second junction with the Ohio River.

The flood waters poured through an old creek bed and swept to the new confluence, 7 miles above the geographical meeting of the rivers.

Cairo itself was in no danger. Highway bridges and railroad trestles over the flood basin kept traffic moving without interrution. Two villages in the inundated area already have been evacuated.

The Mississippi at Cape Girardeau, Mo., soared to 42.4 feet, highest there in history.

The Arkansas, on its second devastating flood in three weeks, climbed to 33.7 feet at Pine Bluff, as compared with a previous high of 33 feet in 1935.

At Little Rock, where the river swept through 50 city blocks yesterday, the tide was falling, although water still was in much of the flooded area.

Sturdy levees guard the Mississippi below Cairo and the Arkansas below Pine Bluff, and Army engineers expect them to hold.

The Illinois River was falling at the beleaguered cities of Peoria and Beardstown, but the danger had not passed, and watch on the levees was being maintained.

The Indiana flood situation was improved. Truck traffic was moving into St. Francisville, which had been isolated by the Wabash River.

Judge Hedrick's Wife Seeks Divorce

Mrs. Janice Rice Hedrick, wife of Judge B. M. Hedrick of the County Court in Arlington, has filed suit for divorce.

Records in county clerk's office show complaint gives desertion as grounds for the suit.

Judge Hedrick yesterday said his wife left home last Saturday and he understood she had obtained a position with the Federal Government. He said papers had been served on him and would answer the suit at the proper time.
